Otu Receives UNICROSS Work Environment Report, Vows Action on Recommendations

By Kingsley Agim

The Governor of Cross River State and Visitor to the University of Cross River State (UNICROSS), Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, has received the report of the Technical Committee on the Review of the Working Environment in the university, assuring staff and students of his administration's commitment to their welfare.

Governor Otu received the report on Monday, September 28, 2026, from the Chairman of the Committee, Bishop Prof. Uduak Effiong, at a ceremony attended by members of the State Executive Council, the UNICROSS Governing Council, management and representatives of the university's industrial unions.

The Governor had inaugurated the committee on July 6, 2026, with a mandate to comprehensively assess the university and make recommendations for addressing challenges affecting its working environment and operations.

Receiving the report, Otu commended Bishop Effiong and members of the committee for their dedication and commitment to the assignment.

He assured the university community that he would carefully study the report, particularly the issues raised concerning the welfare of staff and students.

The Governor reiterated his administration's commitment to the continued development of UNICROSS, saying the State Government would provide the necessary support to strengthen the institution and enable it to continue serving as a centre of learning and manpower development for Cross River State.

Otu said that after studying the report and consulting relevant stakeholders, the State Government would reconvene to consider the recommendations and determine the way forward.

Presenting the report, Bishop Effiong expressed appreciation to the Governor for the confidence reposed in the committee and the opportunity to undertake the assignment.

He also commended the Vice Chancellor of UNICROSS, Prof. Francisca Bassey, for her cooperation and support throughout the committee's engagement with the university.

The presentation of the report marks a further stage in the State

Government's intervention in the affairs of UNICROSS, with the recommendations expected to guide discussions on improving the university's working environment and addressing issues affecting its community.

The ceremony was attended by members of the Cross River State Executive Council; members of the UNICROSS

Governing Council led by its Chairman, Ntufam Dr. Fidelis Ugbo; the Vice Chancellor, Prof. Francisca Bassey, and members of the university management, as well as executive council members of the industrial unions in UNICROSS.

Goodwill Message On The Occasion Of NIGERIA'S 66TH INDEPENDENCE

Anniversary

On behalf of the Cross River State Ministry of Information and Orientation, I heartily felicitate with all Nigerians, particularly the good people of Cross River State, on the momentous occasion of Nigeria's 66th Independence Anniversary.

Sixty-six years after we lowered the colonial flag and hoisted our Green-White-Green, we have every reason to celebrate our resilience as a people, our unity in diversity, and our unwavering faith in the promise of this great nation.

This anniversary provides an opportunity to reflect on our journey - the sacrifices of our founding fathers, the strength of our democracy, and the collective resolve that continues to bind us together as one indivisible nation.

I pay special tribute to the leadership of His Excellency, President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, GCFR, and His Excellency, Vice President Kashim Shettima, GCON, for their steadfast commitment to the Renewed Hope Agenda, economic reform, and national cohesion. Their bold reforms are laying a solid foundation for a more prosperous and secure Nigeria.

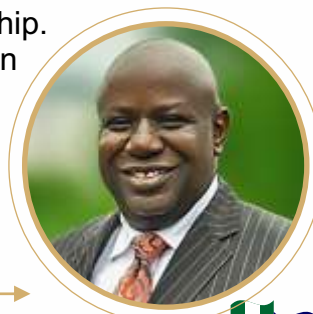

In Cross River State, we are privileged to have a leader whose People First agenda mirrors the national aspiration for renewal. I salute His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, Governor of Cross River State, for his purposeful leadership, peace-building efforts, and infrastructural and socio-economic transformation that is returning Cross River to its pride of place.

As we celebrate, let us as Cross Riverians and Nigerians renew our commitment to peace, patriotism, tolerance and responsible citizenship. Let us continue to support our leaders at all levels and play our part in building the Nigeria of our dreams.

Happy 66th Independence Anniversary!

Long Live Cross River State!
Long Live the Federal Republic of Nigeria!!

Cross River State

On behalf of the Management and Staff of the Ministry of Commerce, Cross River State, I warmly congratulate His Excellency, the Executive Governor, the government, and the industrious people of Cross River State as we join the rest of the Country to celebrate the 66th Independence Anniversary of the Federal Republic of Nigeria.

Today's historic milestone affords us a profound opportunity to reflect on our national journey, honor the sacrifices of our founding fathers, and evaluate our progress. Over the past sixty-six years, through economic transitions and societal evolution, the resilience, enterprise, and diversity of our people have remained our greatest strength.

In Cross River State, this occasion serves as a catalyst for renewed commitment. The Ministry of Commerce remains resolute in its drive to build a robust local economy, foster a thriving business ecosystem, empower MSMEs, and create viable commercial pathways for our vibrant youth.

As we celebrate our national sovereignty, let us recommit to unity, economic growth, and sustainable progress. Together, we can unlock the full commercial potential of our State and build a prosperous future for all.

Hearty Cheers
TO NIGERIA

On behalf of the Permanent Secretary, Management and Staff of the Cross River State Ministry of Women Affairs, I warmly felicitate the President and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, GCFR; the Vice President, Senator Kashim Shettima, GCON; the amiable Governor of Cross River State, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu; and his Deputy, Rt. Hon. Peter Odey, Ph.D, on the auspicious occasion of the 66th Independence Anniversary of our beloved nation, Nigeria.

As we celebrate this remarkable milestone, we remember the sacrifices of our founding fathers whose tireless efforts have sustained our nation. We also recognize the resilience of our leaders who have worked diligently to keep Nigeria united, to restore hope to our citizens, and their unwavering commitment towards advancing the welfare of women, children and vulnerable groups in society at all levels.

May this milestone serve as a reminder of our collective responsibility, resolve and determination to build a healthier, more inclusive, equitable and prosperous nation for all.

Congratulations!

CR Assembly Raises Alarm Over Impending Flood Disaster, Urges Urgent Government Intervention

By Itam Ofor

The Cross River State House of Assembly has called on the State Government, through the Ministry of Works, to take proactive and urgent steps to address the impending flood and erosion danger threatening lives and property at the Assembly Residential Quarters, Ekorinim and the Assembly Office Complex.

This followed a Matter of Urgent Public Importance on the deplorable state of erosion control within the Assembly Residential and Office Complex, sponsored by Hon. Linus Bassey, Member representing Akamkpa II State Constituency.

Presenting the motion, Hon. Bassey noted that the Assembly Quarters, constructed in 1977, is now in a deplorable state, with collapsed erosion control infrastructure endangering the lives and property of Honourable Members, their families and staff.

He pointed out that whenever there is a heavy downpour now a daily occurrence in Calabar members and staff live in palpable fear of erosion flood. He added that to worsen the situation, the perimeter fence that prevented flood from entering the quarters was recently pulled down by flood, while a duplex behind the quarters and a hospital structure nearby were recently brought down by flood.

Hon. Bassey further raised alarm over a ravine around the residential quarters which poses serious

Reacting, the Leader of the House, Rt. Hon.

Francis Asuquo and other members expressed deep concerns, noting that the matter directly affects their welfare and safety, and unanimously supported the motion.

In his remarks, the Speaker, Rt Hon Elvert Ayambem described the motion as timely stressing that the welfare of Legislators as well as all Cross Riverians must be prioritized.

After plenary, the Lawmakers embarked on an oversight visit to the landslide site at the Anansa Road and the erosion site at the Assembly quarters, Ekorinim, Calabar.

During the oversight visit to the Anansa Road landslide, the Leader of the 10th Assembly, Rt Hon Francis Bassey Asuquo, stated that although the incident occurred while the House was on recess, it is of great importance to the Assembly. He added that the erosion challenge, which has already caused extensive damage, be addressed without delay so as to avoid loss of lives and Property.

At the Assembly Residential Quarters, the Leader noted: "What started as a very small narrow path has developed into a gully erosion site which keeps expanding. If nothing is urgently done, it will develop into something more devastating."

In the same vein, the Commissioner for Works, Mr. Pius Edet, who joined the oversight team, lamented the deplorable state of the Assembly quarters.

have already been reported within the Calabar metropolis due to constant rains, and assured that government will take swift measures to redress the issue. He called on other relevant agencies to intervene as the damage is massive.

According to him, "The issue of erosion and landslides in Calabar has become a recurrent decimal due to heavy downpour."

He disclosed that 75 erosion sites

On behalf of the Special Services Office, I extend felicitations to the Government and good people of Cross River State and indeed all Nigerians as we celebrate the 66th Anniversary of Nigeria's Independence. This occasion provides an opportunity to reflect on our nation's journey since independence, celebrate our achievements, acknowledge the challenges before us and renew our collective commitment to building a peaceful, united and prosperous Nigeria.

As a people, our greatest strength lies in our diversity, resilience and shared commitment to the ideals of nationhood. We must therefore continue to promote peace, unity, mutual respect, justice and responsible citizenship.

As we celebrate this important milestone in our national and state history, I urge all citizens, particularly the youth, to embrace the values of patriotism, hard work, discipline and peaceful coexistence. The Nigeria of our dreams can only be achieved through our collective efforts.

May this 66th Independence Anniversary usher in renewed hope, greater unity, sustainable development and prosperity for our dear nation.

Happy 66th Independence Anniversary!

Major General O. U. Obono (Rtd.)
Special Adviser

On the auspicious occasion of Nigeria's 66th Independence Anniversary, I, on behalf of the Management and Staff of the Office of the Auditor-General for Local Government, Cross River State, heartily congratulate our national and state leaders who are steering our country towards sustainable growth, fiscal discipline and grassroots development.

We extend our warmest felicitations to His Excellency, Asiwaju Bola Ahmed Tinubu, GCFR, President and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces, Federal Republic of Nigeria; His Excellency, Senator Kashim Shettima, GCON, Vice President, Federal Republic of Nigeria; His Excellency, Senator (Prince) Bassey Edet Otu, Executive Governor of Cross River State; and his dependable Deputy, Rt. Hon. Dr. Peter Odey.

Your Excellencies, this day not only reminds us of the sacrifices of our founding fathers, but also spotlights your shared commitment to structural reforms, national healing and economic self-reliance.

At the local government level, we particularly appreciate the Federal Government's Renewed Hope Agenda and the State's People First Agenda under Governor Bassey Otu. These policies have prioritized grassroots governance, strengthened institutional frameworks and enhanced accountability at the community level.

As an office dedicated to upholding financial transparency, value for money and statutory compliance within our local government areas, we reaffirm our unwavering commitment to aligning with your visionary leadership.

We pray that Almighty God grants you continued wisdom, sound health and the fortitude to navigate our great nation and state into an era of unprecedented peace and shared prosperity.

CR Assembly Begins Deliberation on the Proposed State Police Amendment Bill

By Itam Ofor

The Cross River State House of Assembly has commenced legislative consideration of the proposed constitutional amendment seeking to establish State Police in the country.

The bill titled: A Bill for an Act to amend the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, 1999, to provide for the Establishment of State Police Services and for Related Matters in the 36 States of the Federation was transmitted by the National Assembly to the 36 State Houses of Assembly for consideration.

The document contains the proposed amendment seeking to provide a constitutional framework for the establishment of State Police Services while retaining the Nigeria Police Force as the Federal Police Service.

The National Assembly transmission included the relevant Bill, votes and proceedings of both chambers of the National Assembly and other documents relating to the proposed constitutional alteration.

During plenary, Members moved and seconded a motion for the correspondence to be called, received and laid on the table.

The House further agreed to receive the document as a working document for consideration.

The Speaker, Rt Hon Elvert Ayambem stressed that the document would undergo the normal legislative process of consideration and debate before the House arrives at a position on the proposed amendment. The House subsequently took the First Reading of the Bill.

Gov Otu Celebrates Donald Duke at 65, Hails His Enduring Legacy

Cross River State governor, Senator Bassey Otu, has poured encomiums on former Governor Donald Duke, on the occasion of his 65th birthday, describing the milestone as an opportunity to celebrate a life distinguished by public service, vision and commitment to the advancement of Cross River State and Nigeria.

In a goodwill message issued by his Special Adviser on Media and Publicity and Chief Press Secretary, Mr

Linus Obogo, to mark Duke's birthday, Governor Otu, on behalf of the Government and the good people of Cross River State, warmly congratulated the former governor, while acknowledging his contributions to the development and visibility of the state.

Otu said the 65th anniversary offered "a fitting moment to honour a life distinguished by public service, vision and an abiding commitment to the advancement of Cross River State and Nigeria."

The governor noted that Duke's years in office constituted "a significant chapter in the history of our State," adding that his administration was defined by "purposeful leadership, innovative thinking and a determination to position Cross River for greater visibility and prosperity."

According to Otu, Duke's contributions transcended the period of his administration, with aspects of his developmental vision continuing to form part of the state's institutional and historical narrative. "Your contributions to our state's development continue to form part of its enduring story," Otu said, underscoring the importance of recognising the contributions of those who have served the state at different periods of its evolution.

The governor further wished the former governor continued strength, wisdom, peace and fulfilment, praying that his years ahead would be "blessed with good health and renewed opportunities to contribute to the progress and unity of our State and nation." "Happy 65th birthday, Your Excellency," Otu declared, as he joined family, friends and well-wishers across Cross River and beyond in celebrating Duke's milestone and wishing him many more years of impactful service and personal fulfilment.

Cross River Water Resources Commissioner Felicitates Nigerians @66; expresses optimism for a better Nigeria

By Benedict Okache

The Cross River State Commissioner for Water Resources, Obol Dr. Moses Osogi, has congratulated Nigerians on the occasion of the nation's 66th Independence Anniversary, calling for renewed commitment to democracy, national unity, and sustainable development.

In a goodwill message issued in Calabar on Wednesday, Dr. Osogi, on behalf of his family, the Permanent Secretary, management, and staff of the Ministry of Water Resources, extended warm congratulations to President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, Vice President Kashim Shettima,

Senate President Godswill Akpabio, Speaker of the House of Representatives Tajudeen Abbas, members of the National Assembly, Federal Executive Council, and all Nigerians on this auspicious 66th Independence Anniversary.

The Commissioner also felicitated with the Governor of Cross River State, Senator Bassey Edet Otu, his deputy, Dr. Peter Odey, the Speaker of the Cross River State House of Assembly, Elvert Ayambem, members of the 10th State House of Assembly, Chairmen of the 18 Local Government Areas, and other democratic stakeholders across the State.

According to him, "Nigeria's Independence Anniversary serves not only as a celebration of the country's sovereignty but also as a reminder of the collective responsibility of citizens to build a stronger and more prosperous nation."

Dr. Osogi reaffirmed the commitment of the Ministry of Water Resources to delivering on its mandate through effective policy implementation, sustainable water management, improved access to water resources, and innovative solutions aimed at enhancing the quality of life of Cross Riverians.

He noted that under the current administration, the Ministry remains focused on strategic initiatives that will support socio-economic development and improve service delivery in the water sector.

The Commissioner further urged Nigerians to use the anniversary celebration as an opportunity to renew their commitment to the ideals of democracy, good governance, peace, and national development.

"Together, we shall continue to advance the vision of a Nigeria where every citizen thrives in dignity and opportunity," he stated.

Dr. Osogi expressed optimism about the future of the country and called on citizens at all levels to continue supporting efforts geared towards national growth and unity.

He concluded his message by wishing the Federal Republic of Nigeria, Cross River State, and the Ministry of Water Resources continued progress and prosperity.

Recognition from resident doctors of improved welfare and health reforms further highlights the connection between supporting medical professionals and serving patients well.

The same concern for human capability runs through youth development.

tricycle assembly. Training valued above ₦600,000 per participant is provided without charge, with a monthly stipend.

A separate oil-and-gas programme targets 2,000 young people across all 18 local government areas.

Together, these initiatives broaden access to technical knowledge that can help young Cross Riverians compete for emerging opportunities.

Enterprise support extends that promise into households and communities. The graduation of 192 beneficiaries from a skills and creative empowerment programme links talent development with the prospect of self-employment.

In Biase, council interventions reported in the roundup include productive equipment for more than 100 residents across 11 wards, vocational training and start-up support for 55 young women, and scholarships benefiting over 120 tertiary students.

These local efforts complement Otu's agenda by connecting education, practical assistance and the means of earning an income. Agriculture supplies the longer horizon for that economic ambition.

Preparations for the International Coffee Festival, scheduled for 30 October–1 November, accompany a plan to distribute 30 million seedlings over five years.

The proposed 2027–2033 livestock roadmap similarly looks across production, veterinary services, processing and markets.

Both initiatives recognise that rural prosperity depends on the connections between what farmers produce and what buyers can purchase.

Their value lies in building viable agricultural businesses, with implementation creating the route from stated targets to dependable livelihoods.

Energy investment can make those businesses more productive.

The state electrification agency's update reports 10,000 solar home systems deployed alongside grid expansion, transformer installations and substation improvements.

With statewide electricity access targeted at 65 per cent by 2027, the administration is combining renewable and conventional approaches.

Reliable power

matters to the tailor meeting an order and the small trader preserving stock.

This practical relationship between electricity and enterprise gives infrastructure spending a clear place within the People First agenda.

Administrative reform supports these visible services. The week's CIVTECH update records more than 2,400 civil servants graduating across six batches, strengthening the skills needed for a modern public service.

Digital revenue administration and proposed harmonisation of taxes and levies seek to simplify compliance and reduce leakages. Professional training for 12 local government auditors adds an accountability dimension.

The governing principle is straightforward: public resources serve citizens better when officials can manage them competently and account for their use.

In education, stronger oversight of private, mission and public schools brings attention to standards, accurate student records, teacher development and protection against unauthorised levies.

These measures address the everyday conditions under which families seek a worthwhile education for their children.

Meanwhile, Carnival Calabar's school writing competition connects cultural expression with literacy and creative confidence.

Such initiatives widen the meaning of development to include the capacity to think, communicate and contribute to society.

Long-term planning gives that contribution room to flourish.

Preparations for the Greater Calabar Summit on 29 September envisage a 40- to 50-year planning horizon spanning housing, drainage, transport and commercial development across seven local government areas.

Environmental restoration in Calabar complements that ambition by addressing public spaces and pedestrian access.

The statewide disability survey adds another essential perspective: planning becomes more responsive when government understands who encounters barriers and where support is needed.

These priorities show substantive alignment with President Bola Ahmed Tinubu's Renewed Hope

Agenda, particularly its emphasis on productive employment, food security, infrastructure and human development.

They also reflect the Progressive Governors Forum's vision of professional, innovative governance supported by collaboration and shared learning.

Cross River offers useful lessons in linking services to economic opportunity, while partnerships across government and communities help national ambitions acquire practical meaning locally.

The week's record

makes a persuasive case for recognising Bassey Edet Otu as a progressive governor par excellence whose approach deserves emulation.

Its strength is the attention given to citizens' ability to live well and participate productively.

Progressively minded citizens, true lovers of Cross River State and Nigerians everywhere should continue to support and encourage this model of leadership through constructive participation, protection of public investments and shared commitment to carrying promising programmes into lasting public benefit.

As an Agency operating within this vibrant State, CRGIA remains committed to supporting the vision of the government and contributing meaningfully to the realization of the “Season of Sweetness” for every resident.

Independence Day is not only a celebration of our freedom; it is also a reminder of our collective responsibility to nation-building.

At CRGIA, we believe that building a stronger Nation requires the active synergy of government, the private sector and civil society. We therefore reaffirm our commitment to accurate geospatial information, efficient land administration and management innovation, sustainable development and the creation of opportunities that contribute to the growth and prosperity of Cross River State and Nigeria.

As we celebrate another year of nationhood, we pray for divine wisdom, good health, peace and strength upon our President, our Governor and all leaders across the nation.

May Nigeria continue to grow in peace, unity and shared prosperity.

Happy Independence Day, Nigeria!

Long live Cross River State!
Long live the Federal Republic of Nigeria!

Sen. Bassey Otu
Governor

On behalf of the Management and Staff of the Cross River State Agency for Industrial Development, I warmly felicitate with the President and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, His Excellency President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, GCFR, the Vice President, His Excellency Senator Kashim Shettima, GCON, the Executive Governor of Cross River State, His Excellency Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, the Deputy Governor, Rt. Hon. Peter Odey, PhD, the Speaker of the Cross River State House of Assembly, Rt. Hon. Elvert Ayambem, and all elected political office holders across the country on the occasion of Nigeria's 66th Independence Anniversary.

This anniversary offers a significant moment to reflect on our nation's journey since independence and to honour the sacrifices of our founding fathers and heroines who laid the foundation for the Nigeria we have today.

As we celebrate this milestone, the Cross River State Agency for Industrial Development remains committed to supporting initiatives that drive industrialisation, investment, entrepreneurship, job creation and sustainable economic development in Cross River State and Nigeria at large.

We commend the leadership at the federal and state levels for their sustained efforts in strengthening the economy, promoting investment and creating opportunities for citizens. We are confident that through collective commitment, innovation, patriotism and purposeful leadership, Nigeria will continue its march towards greater prosperity.

On this auspicious occasion, I call on all Nigerians to renew our commitment to peace, unity, productivity and national development, and to support initiatives that harness our abundant human and natural resources for present and future generations.

May our beloved nation continue to grow in strength, unity and prosperity.

Happy 66th Independence Anniversary!

Long live Cross River State!

How Four LGAs United to Deliver Otu, Tinubu

By Kingsley Agim

Tuesday, September 29, 2026, was a night of political realignment, consultation and renewed solidarity in Cross River State as leaders and stakeholders from Ikrom, Boki, Obubra and Etung converged in Calabar under the Ikrom-Boki-

Obubra-Etung (IBOE) Alliance, declaring their resolve to consolidate their collective political strength ahead of the 2027 general elections.

The special dinner and strategic engagement with Governor Bassey Edet Otu, held at Hogis Hotels, Calabar, brought together political leaders, traditional rulers, community representatives, youths and other stakeholders from the four local government areas, turning what was billed as an engagement into a significant gathering around a common political direction.

At the heart of the meeting was a simple but consequential message: the four LGAs could achieve greater political influence by pooling their numerical strength, reconciling internal differences and speaking with one voice on issues affecting their people.

The alliance said that collective strength would be deployed towards supporting Governor Otu, President Bola Ahmed Tinubu and candidates of the All Progressives Congress (APC) in the 2027 elections, with speakers repeatedly calling for unity from the ward and village levels.

Secretary to the State Government, Prof. Anthony Owan-Enoh, described Ikom, Boki, Obubra and Etung as the "heart" of Cross River State, arguing that their geographical position, human resources, agricultural potential and diversity placed them in a strategic position within the state.

According to him, however, the political and developmental potential of the four LGAs had been weakened over the years by divisions that often prevented them from pursuing common interests.

“Development is unity. Unity is development,” Owan-Enoh declared, urging the people of the four LGAs to abandon divisive tendencies and build stronger relationships capable of producing tangible benefits for their communities.

He stressed that the IBOE Alliance was not intended to create a division within Cross River Central Senatorial District, but to strengthen cooperation among the four LGAs and enable them to make a more coordinated contribution to the development and political affairs of the district.

The chairman of the occasion, former Senate

Leader, Senator Victor Ndoma-Egba, SAN, described politics as a process of consultation, conversation and engagement, saying the peculiar political circumstances confronting the four LGAs required stakeholders to develop a common strategy.

Ndoma-Egba said the meeting was the beginning of a process of wider consultations through which the IBOE Alliance would identify its challenges, harmonise its interests and subsequently present its position to stakeholders across the Central Senatorial District.

For the traditional institutions, the gathering provided an opportunity to carry the message of unity beyond the venue. The Paramount Ruler of Etung, Ambassador Anthony Ntui Ettah, pledged to take the message to clan and village heads, while the Paramount Ruler of Ikom, HRH Minen Takon Atangba, welcomed the decision by the four LGAs to come together as one political bloc.

The Paramount Ruler of Boki, HRM Otu Fredalin, used the occasion to draw attention to the poor state of roads in Boki, saying the condition had continued to make movement and grassroots mobilisation difficult. He nevertheless expressed support for the call for political unity and continuity.

Chief Ernest Irek of Obubra also highlighted what he described as years of developmental deficits in his local government, particularly in roads, healthcare and other public infrastructure, arguing that greater political coordination was necessary for the area to secure increased attention.

A recurring theme throughout the evening was the role of young people in translating the alliance's political message into grassroots action.

Speakers called on youths to take ownership of the emerging political structure and participate actively in mobilisation across wards, clans and communities.

The gathering eventually moved from consultation to a formal political declaration when Hon. Kingsley Ntui Isong moved a motion endorsing Governor Otu, President Tinubu and APC candidates, with Samuel Neji Abang seconding the motion. The declaration was subjected to a voice vote conducted by Ndoma-Egba and received an overwhelming response from participants.

For the IBOE Alliance, however, the significance of the evening will ultimately be measured beyond the applause and declarations made inside the hotel.

The new political alignment, stakeholders said, would foster sustained grassroots organisation across the four LGAs, promote reconciliation among competing interests and strengthen coordination among political leaders, traditional institutions, youths and community structures ahead of the 2027 elections.

It is expected to take the message of unity beyond the walls of the hotel into wards, clans, villages, homes and communities, creating a more coordinated political structure capable of articulating the collective interests of Ikom, Boki, Obubra and Etung.

For now, however, the four LGAs have placed their political cards on the table. They have declared that their strength lies in unity, identified the political direction they intend to pursue and committed themselves to mobilising their combined political resources in support of Governor Otu, President Tinubu and the APC.

The strategic engagement has, therefore, given political expression to a four-LGA alliance seeking to turn unity into organisation, organisation into mobilisation and mobilisation into a common voice for the IBOE axis.

Cross River, UNICAL Deepen Partnership on Fisheries, Aquaculture

By Arit Ubi

The Cross River State Government has pledged to deepen collaboration with the University of Calabar (UNICAL) in fisheries and aquaculture development, with emphasis on research, training and capacity building.

The Special Adviser to the Governor on Livestock Development, Liyel Imoukhuede, made the commitment when he received the Head and representatives of the Department of Fisheries and Aquaculture, University of Calabar, who paid him a courtesy visit.

The delegation also formally invited Imoukhuede to serve as keynote speaker at activities marking World Aquaculture Day.

Imoukhuede said the state government was ready to leverage the expertise of academics and researchers at the university to strengthen the fisheries and aquaculture sector and promote sustainable development.

He identified training and capacity building as immediate areas of collaboration, assuring the academics that the government was open to engaging university lecturers as consultants and resource persons. "We're going to be doing quite some stuff on capacity building. Obviously, we'll leverage on your expertise," he said.

The Special Adviser disclosed that significant investments were being planned in the state's fisheries and aquaculture sector, including the expected arrival of about 15 trawlers following agreements reached with investors.

He said the planned investments would be supported by facilities such as cold-chain systems and fish-processing infrastructure to improve fish production, preservation and processing in the state.

Imoukhuede also stressed the importance of indigenous knowledge in developing the state's fishing industry, noting that local fishermen possess valuable knowledge of fishing locations and marine resources. He said the government was exploring ways of attracting more stakeholders and creating an enabling environment for investment.

Imoukhuede subsequently encouraged the university team to submit proposals for joint training and other programmes, assuring them of the government's readiness to support practical measures to advance fisheries and aquaculture development.

Earlier, the Head of the Department of Fisheries and Aquaculture, University of Calabar, Prof. Oluwatosin Kennedy, said the delegation was seeking stronger partnership with the state government in research, training, consultancy and community development.

Kennedy said the university was ready to deploy its expertise to address challenges confronting fish farmers and improve aquaculture production in Cross River, citing the recent flooding of fish ponds at the university, which damaged dikes and resulted in the loss of broodstock.

She advocated modern production methods, including indoor aquaculture, to minimise losses and improve productivity, while stressing the sector's potential to contribute to food security, employment generation and improved livelihoods in the state.

Kennedy disclosed that the university would organise activities to commemorate World Aquaculture Day and World Fisheries Day, including sensitisation programmes, and called for increased government investment in fisheries, particularly industrial fishing, to expand employment and revenue opportunities across fishing, processing, storage and marketing.

The meeting also explored collaboration in animal handling, farmer sensitisation, research and technical training, with both parties agreeing to develop joint programmes that would translate university expertise and research into practical solutions for farmers, fishermen and other stakeholders.

CR-ROMA Moves to Heal Jagged Potholes on Calabar South Roads

By Christiana Ushang

Traversing the bustling corridors of Calabar South, the daily commute has long tested the patience of motorists, traders and commuters.

Maneuvering a maze of jagged potholes, dodging sudden dips and enduring frustrating traffic bottlenecks have been the norm.

By Christiana Ushang

But a much-needed transformation is finally underway.

The Cross River State Road Maintenance Agency (CR-ROMA) has rolled into action, bringing renewed hope and heavy machinery to some of the local government's most battered and high-traffic arteries.

Spearheaded by the agency's Director-General, Hon. Christopher Ntui, the intervention is a targeted strike against urban decay.

Rather than empty promises, CR-ROMA has deployed engineers, field workers and state-of-the-art road maintenance equipment to the front lines of the city's infrastructure challenges.

Backed by funding from the Cross River State Government, the rehabilitation blitz focuses on critical, high-stress nodes. Strategic junctions and corridors including Mayne Avenue by Atamunu, Mayne Avenue by Ekpo Abasi, the Ekpo Abasi Roundabout and the busy axis near New Airport Road have already been resuscitated.

Hon. Ntui is transparent about the scope of the project, managing expectations while emphasising practical impact. "This work does not cover the entire stretch of the road," Hon. Ntui clarified.

"Rather, it involves surface patching, asphalt overlay and remediation of failed sections to eliminate potholes and ease traffic flow on that axis."

While the initiative is focused on spot remediation rather than total reconstruction, its economic and social benefits are profound.

For a commercial hub like Calabar South, smooth roads translate directly into reduced vehicular wear and tear, shorter travel times and a safer environment for pedestrians and motorists.

Local business owners and commercial drivers, who have long borne the brunt of lost productivity and high vehicle maintenance costs due to poor road conditions, are already welcoming the change. Smoother movement means goods get to market faster, customers can access shops with ease, and the daily grind of transit becomes less exhausting. As the rumble of construction equipment echoes along Mayne Avenue and Ekpo Abasi, it serves as a tangible reminder of proactive governance. For residents of Calabar South, this intervention is more than a quick fix of asphalt and gravel, it is a promise kept. Hon.

Ntui assures residents and commuters that the state government, through CR-ROMA, is only just warming up, and the agency remains firmly committed to keeping Cross River's vital road networks safe, seamless and motorable for years to come.

HEARTY CHEERS TO NIGERIA @66

As the Federal Republic of Nigeria marks her 66th Independence Anniversary today, it is with tremendous joy, deep appreciation, and unfaltering allegiance that I join the government and the great people of our dear nation in celebrating this colossal benchmark of national growth. Sixty-six years as the Giant of Africa is a testament to our enduring strength, cultural diversity, and collective resilience through every season of our national journey.

On behalf of my family, the Board, Management, and the entire staff of the Cross River Road Maintenance Agency (CR-ROMA), I felicitate our visionary leader and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, His Excellency, President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, GCFR, alongside the Vice President, Senator Kashim Shettima, GCON. We also extend our warm congratulations to the Senate President, Senator Godswill Akpabio, the Speaker of the Federal House of Representatives, Rt. Hon. Tajudeen Abbas, all Distinguished Federal Legislators, members of the Federal Executive Council, and patriotic citizens across the country who continue to lay the groundwork for a prosperous future.

Here at home in our beloved paradise State, this celebration shines even brighter under the transformative leadership of our esteemed "People First" Governor, His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, and his beloved wife and First Lady, Her Excellency, Bishop Dr. Mrs. Eyoanwan Otu, dedicated Deputy, Rt. Hon. Peter Odey. Their relentless commitment to grassroots development, economic revitalization, and infrastructural renewal continues to set a stellar benchmark for public service.

We equally celebrate the Honorable Speaker of the State House of Assembly, Rt. Hon. Elvert Eyambem, and members of the Assembly; the State Chief Judge, Justice Akon Ikpeme; members of the State Executive Council; and the tenacious, industrious people of Cross River State.

At CR-ROMA, we recognize that durable road infrastructure is the arterial network of economic integration, agricultural growth, and rural-urban connectivity. As we celebrate 66 years of nationhood, our resolve remains absolute, to support the "People First" agenda by ensuring our roadways remain safe, motorable, and structurally sound to drive commerce and mobility across Cross River State. Let us continue to work hand in hand, building a stronger, safer, and more prosperous Nigeria from the grassroots up.

Congratulations Your Excellencies!

66th Independence Anniversary: Dr. Mathias Unimke Angioha Felicitates President Tinubu, Governor Otu, Other Leaders And Nigerians

By Ann Bassey

The Honourable Commissioner for Industry, Cross River State, Dr. Mathias Unimke Angioha, felicitates with the President and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, His Excellency, President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, GCFR, the Vice President, His Excellency, Senator Kashim Shettima, GCON, the Executive Governor of Cross River State, His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, the Deputy Governor of Cross River State, Rt. Hon. Peter Odey, PhD.

Cross River State House of Assembly, Rt. Hon. Elvert Ayambem and all elected political office holders across the country on the occasion of Nigeria's 66th Independence Anniversary.

The anniversary is a significant milestone in Nigeria's journey as a sovereign nation and an opportunity to reflect on the sacrifices, resilience and patriotism of the nation's founding fathers and all Nigerians who have contributed to the growth and development of the country.

I commend the leadership at the national and state levels for their continued efforts towards strengthening the economy, promoting peace and security, improving infrastructure and creating an enabling environment for investment, enterprise and Industrial development particularly reaffirming the importance of sustained collaboration among the Federal Government, State Governments, the private sector and other stakeholders in building a productive and prosperous Nigeria.

Industrialisation remains central to Nigeria's economic transformation, as a vibrant Industrial sector can create employment opportunities, stimulate innovation, strengthen local value chains, increase government revenue and promote sustainable development. I therefore reiterates the commitment of the Cross River State Ministry of Industry to supporting policies and initiatives that will attract investment, promote local Industries and harness the abundant economic potential of the State for the benefit of its people.

I call on Nigerians to continue to uphold the values of unity, patriotism, peaceful coexistence, hard work and responsible citizenship which I'm optimistic that through determination, innovation and constructive cooperation, the country will continue to overcome its challenges and fulfil its enormous potential.

Congratulates to all Nigerians at home and in the Diaspora and wishes the President, Vice President, Our Dear Governor, deputy Governor, able speaker State House of Assembly and entire people of Nigeria a joyous and memorable 66th Independence Anniversary.

May the Federal Republic of Nigeria continue to grow in peace, unity, prosperity and industrial strength.

Happy 66th Independence Anniversary, Nigeria!

Gov Otu's People-first Agenda In Cross River: Rural Roads, Healthcare, Tourism And Feedback

By Ukongikwen Adie Nzuanke

There is a point in governance when promises must move beyond campaign rhetoric to take physical shape in the lives of citizens.

Recent developments in Bekwarra, Ogoja and Obudu Local Government Areas in the Northern Senatorial District offer a glimpse into efforts to make that transition under Governor Bassey Otu's administration.

From a 10-kilometre rural road in Bekwarra, to a 40-bed hospital in Idum-Mbube and renewed efforts to reposition the Obudu Ranch Resort as an international tourism destination, an emerging pattern of development built around connectivity, welfare, economic opportunity and investment is taking shape.

The flag-off of the 10-kilometre Ugboro–Ukpah–Afrike Road in Bekwarra represents more than just another road project. For communities along the corridor, the road has the potential to transform their economic fortunes.

Representing Governor Otu at the flag-off, Deputy Governor Peter Odey described the project as another milestone in the implementation of the administration's People First agenda.

According to him, the road will improve access to rural communities, facilitate the movement of agricultural produce, stimulate commerce, strengthen access to healthcare and education, and create new economic opportunities.

Odey urged the contractor to engage qualified local labour and source materials locally where practicable, while calling on community leaders and youths to support the contractor and create an environment conducive to timely completion.

In appreciation, the Executive Chairman of Bekwarra LGA, Hon. Egbung Odama, described Governor Otu as a promise-keeper and welcomed the intervention as a response to a long-standing infrastructural need.

In Idum-Mbube, Ogoja Local Government Area, Deputy Governor Odey performed the groundbreaking for the 40-bed Oturikang Hospital, an initiative established through his personal intervention.

He described the project as more than a ceremonial groundbreaking, assuring residents that construction would commence immediately.

The facility is intended to provide quality, accessible healthcare to residents of Idum and neighbouring communities, reducing the burden of travelling long distances for medical attention.

The Deputy Governor also committed ₦100 million towards commencement of construction.

The intervention is significant because it combines public leadership with personal philanthropy and community development. Traditional authorities in Idum welcomed the initiative, describing it as capable of making a direct difference in the lives of residents.

At the same ceremony, Dr. Odey, who is also Lekwel E' Mbe 1 of Mbube, reiterated the state government's commitment to ongoing infrastructure projects, including the Ndok-Mbube Road and the proposed extension towards Utugwang.

The message from the community was therefore not simply gratitude for one project, but an expectation that individual interventions would become part of a wider development corridor linking roads, healthcare, commerce and communities. Perhaps nowhere is the administration's ambition for economic transformation more visible than in Obudu.

During a banquet in honour of Foreign Defence Advisers and Defence Attachés visiting Cross River State, Deputy Governor Odey used the occasion to articulate the state's tourism and investment position.

His message was straightforward: Cross River's natural endowments should not merely be admired; they should be converted into sustainable economic opportunities.

The administration's effort to revitalise and reposition the Obudu Ranch Resort as a world-class tourism destination is part of a larger economic strategy.

Tourism has the potential to generate employment, stimulate hospitality and transportation businesses, attract investment and increase Cross River's visibility beyond Nigeria.

Odey also linked tourism development to peace and security, presenting Cross River as a peaceful and secure environment capable of supporting investment and international engagement.

The presence of Foreign Defence Advisers and Defence Attachés at Obudu provided an unusual but important diplomatic opportunity.

The state was able to showcase its tourism assets while simultaneously presenting its security environment and investment potential.

The delegation's programme included a guided tour of the resort, cultural displays, a bonfire ceremony and presentation of souvenirs.

The Chief of Defence Intelligence, Lt. Gen. Emmanuel Parker Undiandeye, represented by Major General Ojogbane Adegbe, said the visit was designed to expose the foreign defence representatives to Nigeria's geography, culture, security environment and development priorities.

That convergence of tourism and international engagement is important.

For Cross River State, the objective is no longer simply to attract tourists for short visits. The larger ambition is to build a destination capable of attracting investment, partnerships and sustained economic activity.

The tourism conversation also reinforces security as a pillar of Governor Otu's development strategy.

By emphasising Cross River's peaceful environment before an international audience, the administration effectively presented security as part of the state's economic infrastructure.

That is a strategic shift in how development is understood. Security is not merely a law-and-order issue; it is a prerequisite for tourism, agriculture, commerce and investment.

At the centre of several of these engagements is Deputy Governor Rt. Hon. Dr. Peter Agbe Odey, whose public interventions have increasingly provided a window into the administration's broader development philosophy.

As Deputy Governor, Odey

has represented Governor Otu at major projects and diplomatic engagements, but his interventions have also increasingly reflected a distinct emphasis on community participation, local content and direct human impact.

At Bekwarra, the emphasis was on opening up rural communities and strengthening economic activity.

At Idum-Mbube, it was healthcare and personal investment in community welfare.

At Obudu, the emphasis shifted to tourism, international partnerships, security and investment.

Similarly, Governor

Otu reaffirmed that public feedback remains an indispensable pillar of good governance, describing citizens' participation as critical to building a responsive, accountable and people-centred government.

The Governor's position was conveyed by Deputy Governor Odey, who represented him at the Public Advocacy Summit themed, "The Role of the People in the People's Government: Institutionalizing the Feedback Mechanism," organised by the Special Adviser to the Governor on Content Development and Archiving.

Declaring the summit open at the Metropolitan Hotel, Calabar, Odey said the People First administration recognises public feedback as a vital instrument for shaping policies and programmes, stressing that governance is most effective when it reflects the aspirations and concerns of the people.

He noted that democracy extends beyond the electoral process, stressing that continuous engagement between government and citizens fosters trust, accountability and inclusive development, while describing the People First mantra as a deliberate commitment to placing the welfare of Cross Riverians at the heart of governance.

He emphasised that the voice of the people remains a key measure of purposeful leadership, noting that the administration consistently reviews its policies in response to citizens' feedback.

He therefore encouraged political office holders to sustain regular town hall meetings to remain connected to the needs and aspirations of the people.

The common denominator in all these engagements is PEOPLE.

That consistency is important because development is rarely achieved through isolated projects.

Healthcare facilities require roads to connect the communities they serve.

Tourism requires roads, security and hospitality infrastructure. Agriculture requires access roads to markets. Investment requires stability. Governor Otu's development philosophy appears increasingly anchored on a simple proposition: put people at the centre, build the infrastructure that connects them to opportunities, invest in their welfare, and create conditions for private enterprise and international partnerships to flourish.

MINISTRY OF WATER RESOURCES
OFFICE OF THE HONOURABLE COMMISSIONER

Ref:CR/MWR/

Date: 21st September, 2026.

PRESS STATEMENT:

STRICT IMPLEMENTATION OF WASH POLICY REGULATIONS IN CROSS RIVER STATE

The Cross River State Government wishes to formally notify all Borehole Drilling Companies, Water Service Providers, Consultants, developers, Institutions, Communities, Households and relevant stakeholders that it is commencing the strict implementation and enforcement of all existing Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) policy regulations governing groundwater development and water supply services across the Eighteen Local Government Areas of the State.

The State Government has observed with grave concern the increasing rate of indiscriminate Borehole drilling, operation of unregistered Water Service Providers, non-compliance with established technical standards, and the proliferation of unsafe water infrastructure in many parts of the State. These practice poses serious risks to public health, groundwater resources, environmental sustainability, and the welfare of citizens in general.

Government further wishes to place on record that access to safe and clean water is a fundamental right of every citizen. However, this right can only be guaranteed when water supply systems are developed and managed in accordance with approved standards and regulatory requirements. The era where individuals and companies operated without accountability in the water sector in the State is over.

Consequently, the Cross River State Government through the Ministry of Water Resources, in collaboration with relevant Regulatory Agencies and Stakeholders, shall immediately intensify implementation, monitoring, inspection, compliance verification, and enforcement activities throughout the State.

All Borehole Service Providers are hereby directed to comply with the following requirements:

Mandatory Registration and Licensing:

No individual, company, or organization shall engage in borehole drilling, rehabilitation, water supply installation, or related services without registration and licensing by the Cross River State Ministry of Water Resources.

Mandatory Permit and Authorization:

No borehole project shall commence without prior approval, permit, or authorization from the Ministry of Water Resources.

Compliance with Technical Standards:

All proposed boreholes projects must undergo the required geophysical and geological investigations before drilling.

Appropriate drilling methods, approved materials, well casing, grouting procedures, and water quality standards must be strictly adhered to.
Water quality testing shall be mandatory before commissioning and utilisation of any borehole facility.

Submission of Drilling Records:

All Operators must maintain and submit drilling logs, completion reports, pumping test records, and other relevant technical documentation as may be required by the Ministry.

Environmental Protection Measures:

All Service Providers must ensure environmentally responsible drilling practices and safe disposal of drilling waste to prevent pollution of groundwater and surrounding ecosystems.

The Government further directs all residents, institutions, schools, hospitals, hotels, industries, estate developers, and community organizations to engage only licensed and approved Borehole Service Providers. Citizens are encouraged to demand evidence of registration, permits, and water quality certification before making any payment for borehole services.

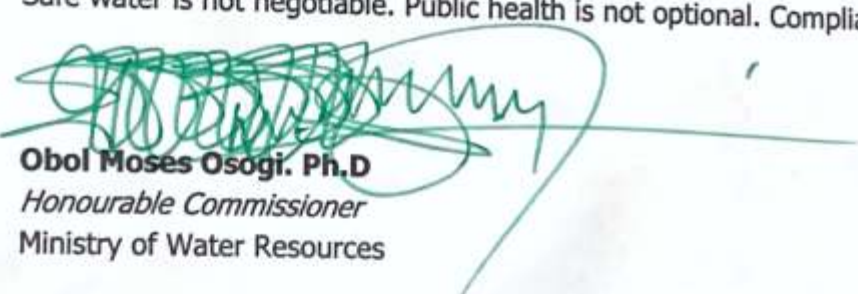

In this regard, the Government wishes to point out that Enforcement Teams shall be deployed across the State to identify and prosecute defaulters. Any individual or organization found drilling boreholes without authorization, operating without registration, violating established standards, falsifying records, or compromising public water safety standard shall face the full weight of the law, including sanctions, closure of operations, fines, and prosecution where applicable.

This exercise is not intended to frustrate legitimate businesses; rather, it is aimed at sanitizing the sector, protecting consumers, promoting professionalism, preserving groundwater resources, and ensuring that every citizen has access to safe and potable water.

The Government remains committed to achieving universal access to clean water and sanitation in line with national WASH objectives and Sustainable Development Goal 6. Such goals can only be realized through collective responsibilities, strict compliance, and effective enforcement.

The message is simple and unequivocal: all Borehole Service Providers must comply with WASH regulations or face the consequences of non-compliance.

Safe water is not negotiable. Public health is not optional. Compliance is mandatory.

The Frontier Shield: How Cross River Is Restructuring Its Livestock Empire From The Borders Out

By Arit Ubi

At the quiet edge of Etung Local Government Area, along the lush corridor of Cross River State, a long-standing vulnerability in West African agriculture is finally being dismantled.

For decades, open borders meant invisible risks: thousands of cattle, goats and sheep moving across regional boundaries largely unchecked, carrying the silent threat of transboundary animal diseases. Today, that vulnerability meets a high-tech wall of biosecurity.

The Federal Government has officially commissioned Nigeria's inaugural Border Animal Holding and Quarantine Facility in Nfum, Ajaso Clan.

Built under the World Bank-assisted Livestock Productivity and Resilience Support (L-PRES) Project, the state-of-the-art complex marks a tangible milestone in President Bola Ahmed Tinubu's Renewed Hope Agenda for the newly established Federal Ministry of Livestock Development.

Commissioning the complex, the Minister of Livestock Development, Dr. Idi Mukhtar Maiha, framed the Nfum site not merely as physical infrastructure, but as a structural turning point.

"This facility demonstrates the Federal Government's commitment to transforming Nigeria's livestock industry into a modern, resilient, productive and globally competitive sector," Dr. Maiha emphasised.

Every head of livestock crossing through the Nfum corridor will now undergo a strict diagnostic protocol: entry reception, temporary quarantine, health inspection, documentation and biosecurity certification before gaining entry into the domestic market.

The Nfum facility is merely the vanguard.

Dr. Maiha revealed that it is the first of 12 international border animal holding and quarantine centres slated for construction across Nigeria's strategic livestock corridors, with upcoming sites earmarked for Adamawa, Borno, Yobe, Jigawa, Kano, Sokoto, Niger and Kebbi States.

Conceived under the Innovation and Institutional Systems Strengthening component of the World Bank-supported L-PRES Project, the facility directly supports the statutory mandate of the Nigeria Agricultural Quarantine Service (NAQS).

According to Dr. Sanusi Abubakar, National Coordinator of the L-PRES Project, the vision extends well beyond basic quarantine.

It involves geospatial tracking — integrating technology to provide pastoral advisory services and map herds — and traceability integration that generates critical entry data for rapid response to regional disease outbreaks.

Aligning with Governor Bassey Otu's People First Agenda, the strategic siting of the facility in Cross River State underscores the powerful alignment between federal priorities and the state government's vision.

Representing the Governor, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, the Secretary to the State Government, Prof. Anthony Owan-Enoh, commended the Federal Government for locating the landmark project in Cross River and assured federal authorities of the state's total commitment to protecting the investment.

Crucial to this partnership is Governor Otu's People First Agenda, which places heavy emphasis on gender-responsive development, social inclusion and economic empowerment.

As Cross River continues to expand opportunities across all socio-economic sectors, the new facility is positioned to stimulate border-community commerce, creating sustainable, gender-inclusive livelihoods for livestock traders, women entrepreneurs and local workers.

At the operational helm in Cross River State, state-level project execution and professional veterinary oversight are unified under the single leadership of Dr. Undiandeye Jude.

Serving concurrently as the Director of Veterinary Services in the Ministry of Livestock, Aquaculture and Fisheries Development and the State Project Coordinator for the L-PRES Project, Dr. Undiandeye directly bridges local World Bank project implementation with state veterinary biosecurity.

Dr. Undiandeye identified transboundary animal diseases as one of the most persistent threats confronting Nigeria's livestock sector.

Leveraging his dual mandate, he outlined key strategies to ensure long-term operational impact, including directing both state L-PRES implementation and veterinary regulatory checks to ensure seamless disease interdiction and border biosecurity.

While the commissioning marks an unprecedented leap forward, operational leaders are already focused on scaling the site to maximum capacity.

Speaking on behalf of the Comptroller-General of NAQS, Dr. Vincent Isegbe, Assistant Comptroller-General Dr. Tekla Ekechukwu highlighted key expansion requirements, including full perimeter fencing, enhanced grid integration and sustained supplies of specialised veterinary chemicals.

Echoing these points, the Executive Chairman of Etung LGA and the Paramount Ruler of Etung, His Royal Majesty Ambassador Anthony Ntui Etta, who facilitated the initial three-hectare land donation, urged the inclusion of local host-community youths and women in operational staffing to promote genuine community ownership.

As regional commerce under the African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA) accelerates, the Nfum facility establishes a clear standard: Nigeria is securing its borders, protecting its food systems and building an inclusive, modern livestock supply chain ready for the global stage.

C'River Moves to Enforce WASH Regulations, Warns Illegal Borehole Operators

By Benedict Okache

The Cross River State Government has announced the commencement of strict implementation and enforcement of Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) regulations governing groundwater development and water supply services across the State, warning Borehole Service Providers and other Stakeholders to comply with established standards or face sanctions.

groundwater resources, and the overall welfare of citizens.

He noted that while access to safe and clean water remains a fundamental right, such access can only be guaranteed when water infrastructure is developed and managed in line with approved regulatory requirements.

The directive was contained in Press Statement issued by the Commissioner for Water Resources, Obol Moses Osogi, who said the government was concerned about the increasing rate of indiscriminate borehole drilling, the activities of unregistered operators, and widespread violations of technical standards in the water sector.

According to the Commissioner, the proliferation of poorly regulated borehole projects poses significant threats to public health, environmental sustainability,

"The era of operating without accountability in the water sector is over," Osogi declared, adding that the Ministry of Water Resources, working with relevant Regulatory Agencies and Stakeholders, would intensify monitoring, inspections, compliance verification, and enforcement activities across the State.

Under the new enforcement guidelines, all Borehole Drilling Companies, Consultants, Developers, Institutions, and Water Service Providers are required to obtain registration and licensing from the Ministry of Water Resources before engaging in any drilling, rehabilitation, water installation, or related services.

The government also directed that no borehole project should commence without obtaining the necessary permit or authorisation from the designated Regulatory Authority within the Ministry.

As part of efforts to ensure quality and safety, the Ministry mandated that all proposed boreholes projects must undergo geophysical and geological investigations before drilling. Operators are also required to comply with approved drilling methods, utilise standard materials, follow proper well casing and grouting procedures, and conduct compulsory water quality testing before any borehole is commissioned for public use.

In addition, Service Providers providers must maintain and submit drilling logs, pumping test records, completion reports, and other technical documentation required by the government, stressing further that the importance of environmental protection, directing operators to adopt environmentally responsible drilling practices and ensure the safe disposal of drilling waste to prevent groundwater contamination and damage to surrounding ecosystems.

The Government in the Statement, equally appealed to residents, schools, hospitals, hotels, industries, estate developers, and community organisations to patronise only licensed and approved Borehole Contractors.

Citizens were also encouraged to request evidence of registration, permits, and water quality certification before engaging any service provider.

Obol Osogi warned that enforcement teams would be deployed throughout the State to identify and prosecute violators, noting that individuals or organisations found drilling boreholes without authorisation, operating without registration, breaching technical standards, falsifying records, or endangering public water safety would face penalties, including fines, closure of operations, and prosecution where necessary.

The Water Resources Commissioner explained that the enforcement exercise is not designed to hinder legitimate businesses but rather to sanitise the sector, enhance professionalism, protect consumers, preserve groundwater resources, and guarantee access to safe drinking water.

Reaffirming the State's commitment to national WASH objectives and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal Six on clean water and sanitation, Obol Osogi said meaningful progress would only be achieved through collective responsibility, strict compliance, and effective enforcement.

He warned Borehole operators to henceforth be properly guided, adding that compliance with WASH regulations is now mandatory.

"Safe water is not negotiable. Public health is not optional. Compliance is mandatory," the Commissioner said.

Life After Retirement: Governor Otu's Administration Promotes Retiree Entrepreneurship Development Initiative

By Innocent Ashiwhobel

The Cross River State Government, under the leadership of Governor Bassey

Edet Otu, has continued to promote policies and programmes aimed at improving the welfare of retirees through the Retiree Entrepreneurship Development Initiative.

The initiative is designed to prepare retired civil servants for a productive and sustainable life after active service.

It recognises that retirement should not mark the end of a person's productive contribution to society.

Rather, it can be an opportunity for retirees to convert their years of experience, skills and knowledge into viable businesses and other income-generating ventures.

Through the programme, retirees are encouraged and supported to acquire entrepreneurial skills, develop business ideas and explore opportunities in areas such as agriculture, agro-processing, small-scale manufacturing, trading, services and other sectors with potential for sustainable income.

The Governor Otu-led administration believes that empowering retirees will not only improve their quality of life but also reduce financial dependence and enable them to remain active contributors to the state's economy.

The initiative also places emphasis on entrepreneurship training, mentorship, financial literacy and access to opportunities that can help beneficiaries establish and manage small businesses successfully.

For many civil servants, retirement comes with a major transition from a regular salary structure to a different financial reality.

The Retiree Entrepreneurship Development Initiative

therefore seeks to make this transition less difficult by equipping retirees with practical tools for life beyond government employment.

Beyond financial empowerment, the programme promotes dignity and self-reliance among retirees.

It encourages beneficiaries to see retirement not as an end, but as the beginning of another phase where experience can be transformed into productive ventures.

The initiative is also expected to contribute to employment creation and local economic development, as retirees who establish successful businesses can employ other members of their communities.

The Otu administration's approach reflects its broader commitment to inclusive development, human capital development and policies that place people at the centre of governance.

With appropriate training, mentorship and support, retirees can continue to contribute meaningfully to society while securing additional sources of income for themselves and their families.

Ultimately, the Retiree Entrepreneurship Development Initiative represents a shift in the perception of retirement — from a period of inactivity to an opportunity for reinvention, enterprise and continued service to society.

For Cross River retirees, the message is clear: retirement is not the end of the journey; it is the beginning of a new chapter of possibilities.

Repositioning the Public and Civil Service: The Otu Administration's Transformation Agenda through the Ministry of Establishments, Training and Pensions

By Otu Orlando

of His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu. Since 2023, the Ministry, under the leadership of the Commissioner, Hon. Mrs Lawrencia E Ita, has pursued reforms focused on strengthening workforce administration, improving pensions management, developing human capital, modernising records and establishment processes, and promoting professionalism across the service. One of the Ministry's major achievements is the operational

Ministry has sustained various capacity-building initiatives for officers across the state. Orientation and induction programmes have been organised for improved data management, better coordination, and more efficient processing of establishment and pension records. The Ministry is also advancing the computerisation of documentation, and making public and civil administration faster and more efficient. Recognising that an efficient public and civil service depends largely on the quality and competence of its workforce, the newly recruited officers across the state's 18 local government areas, equipping them with knowledge of public and civil service rules, ethics, responsibilities, and expected standards of conduct. The Ministry has also conducted training programmes and workshops designed to strengthen professionalism, institutional efficiency, and service delivery. In its effort to improve documentation and administrative efficiency, the Ministry organised a two-day workshop on effective registry and records management for staff of ministries, departments, and agencies across the state. The programme was aimed at strengthening the documentation culture, improving file security and retrieval, promoting accountability, and ensuring efficient management of official records. Pensions administration remains a critical responsibility of the Ministry, which has instituted reforms aimed at improving the management and digitalisation of pension records and personnel data. These efforts are geared towards making pensions administration more organised, transparent, and efficient, while strengthening the integrity of pension documentation and reducing avoidable delays. Another significant initiative is the conduct of the Annual Compulsory Examination for Administrative and Professional Officers in the Cross River State Public and Civil Service. The examination is conducted across the three senatorial districts, with centres in Calabar, Ikom, and Ogoja, giving officers the opportunity to demonstrate knowledge of relevant laws, and of management, personnel, financial, and security matters. The initiative reinforces professionalism, competence, and continuous development within the public and civil service. The Ministry has equally continued to strengthen institutional governance through administrative reforms, the implementation and review of schemes of service, personnel documentation, and the standardisation of public and civil service operations. The provision of ICT tools, office furniture, and modern file-management equipment has further enhanced the working environment and supported more effective service delivery. Going forward, the Ministry remains committed to deepening digital transformation, sustaining manpower development programmes, improving pension administration, strengthening records management, and promoting continuous professional development. Its goal is to build a more efficient, professional, digitally driven, and accountable public and civil service — one capable of responding effectively to the needs of government and the people of Cross River State. The achievements of the Ministry of Establishments, Training and Pensions reflect a deliberate commitment to public and civil service renewal under the People First Agenda of Governor Bassey Otu. From digital governance and workforce orientation to institutional reform, training, records management, and pension administration, the Ministry is steadily repositioning the Cross River State Public and Civil Service for greater efficiency, professionalism, accountability, and excellence in service delivery. The journey continues, with a clear vision of a modern public and civil service built on competence, technology, integrity, and service to the people.

Effective Public Relations Strategies for Sustainable Development

By Joe Ashibekong

In an era defined by rapid technological advancement and digital transformation, effective communication has become the ultimate lifeblood of organizational success.

Public relations (PR) now stands firmly at the forefront, playing a pivotal role in shaping public perception, fostering enduring relationships, and navigating an increasingly complex digital landscape.

For modern enterprises and institutions, PR is far more than simply managing media relations or crafting compelling press releases.

It encapsulates a holistic approach to building trust with diverse stakeholders, from customers and employees to investors and the general public. As our world functions more like a hyper-connected global village, an organization's digital footprint is frequently its first enduring point of contact.

A meticulously designed website, active social media profiles, and consistent, relevant content creation serve as the pillars of credibility in the modern age.

However, when it comes to the monumental challenge of sustainable development, the stakes are higher still.

Turning high-level environmental and social goals into real, grassroots community action requires a fundamental shift in how organizations communicate.

Championing Transparency Over "Greenwashing" At the heart of any credible sustainability initiative lies absolute transparency.

In a marketplace saturated with eco-friendly buzzwords, organizations must actively avoid greenwashing by backing every claim with rigorous, verifiable data.

Building genuine public trust demands clarity. Organizations must openly communicate their current performance metrics, acknowledge ongoing operational challenges, and clearly outline future reduction targets.

This commitment to honesty forms the bedrock of long-term reputation management.

Moving Toward Two-Way Dialogue Traditional PR often relied on simple message broadcasting, a one-way street of information delivery. Sustainable development, however, requires a two-way symmetrical communication model.

By fostering open dialogue between corporations, government bodies, and local communities, organizations can cultivate mutual accountability. Creating structured feedback loops where stakeholders can freely voice concerns, ask critical questions, and co-create local sustainability solutions ensures that initiatives are truly collaborative rather than top-down mandates.

Macro-level frameworks, such as the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), can often feel abstract to the everyday citizen. Effective PR bridges this gap through human-centered, culturally grounded storytelling.

By replacing heavy scientific jargon with simple, accessible language and engaging visuals, communicators can connect global goals to daily concerns.

When sustainability initiatives directly address local health, job creation, and community growth in regional languages, complex global ideas become digestible and deeply personal.

Internal Advocacy and Grassroots Partnerships

Sustainable development cannot succeed in a vacuum; it requires internal alignment and external collaboration.

Organizations must train and empower their employees to become authentic brand ambassadors by keeping them actively involved in internal sustainability initiatives.

Externally, true impact is achieved through deep local partnerships. Collaborating closely with grassroots groups, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and community leaders ensures that projects fit local cultural contexts, fostering a genuine sense of ownership within the community.

Proactive Crisis Management and Corporate Responsibility

In the unpredictable environment of modern business, no organization is entirely immune to crises.

However, reputational damage is rarely determined by the crisis itself, but rather by how an organization responds.

Proactive crisis management—identifying potential risks in advance, running response simulations, and maintaining swift, transparent communication—is essential to preserving public trust during turbulent times.

Complementing
risk management is the strategic deployment of Corporate Social Responsibility

(CSR).

Being a responsible corporate citizen is both a moral imperative and a powerful PR asset. By embedding yearly community projects, charitable initiatives, and environmental preservation efforts into their operational DNA, businesses not only enhance their brand image but also build lasting consumer loyalty in an increasingly crowded and conscious marketplace.

Ultimately, as sustainable development becomes the definitive challenge of our time, public relations serves as the bridge between corporate intention and meaningful societal impact.

What steps is your organization taking to ensure its sustainability messaging translates into real, measurable community impact?

The Economic Implications of Electric Vehicle Policy and State Development: Otu's Pioneering and Enterprising Spirit

By Iloke Egbe

Since the inception of the administration of His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, as Governor of Cross River State, policies have been consciously crafted to reflect the Governor's "People First" mantra and to demonstrate the sincerity of his intent to reduce multidimensional poverty among residents of the state.

It is remarkable to reflect on the positive results of these policies, which carry both short- and long-term impacts on the people and the environment, while demonstrating the Governor's deep understanding of the challenges facing Cross Riverians and residents of the state.

Within the forty-four months of the Governor's stewardship, numerous policies have been formulated and implemented to address fundamental challenges that had long served as indices of a retrogressive economy in the state.

These include the restoration of the state's status as an oil-producing state, the return of the premium Tinapa Resort, the Calabar Deep Seaport project, and the supply of electric vehicles to Permanent Secretaries under a pilot scheme to encourage a green economy.

Others include a revolution in the agricultural sector; the upgrading and construction of health facilities across the state's 196 political wards; the establishment of the University of Education and Entrepreneurship; and the revival of the state's air fleet to support and reposition the tourism subsector, among others.

These initiatives are aimed at re-establishing the state's mission as the "People's Paradise." Among the many policies and programmes implemented by the administration, one aspect deserves closer analysis for its wide-ranging benefits to government and individuals alike: the electric vehicle policy promoted by the present administration.

The Governor deserves commendation for the visionary leadership, foresight, and bold steps he has taken to change the narrative of the state — evident in the return of peace and the creation of a business environment that promotes stability and economic growth, to the mutual benefit of government and the governed.

The benefits of adopting electric vehicles as a pillar of economic growth extend well beyond expectation, and the sector alone holds real potential to expand economic inclusion for young people, regardless of gender or age.

A closer examination of the electric vehicle subsector shows its potential to deliver cost savings, spur new industries, and support cleaner economic growth.

The adoption of electric vehicles can reduce dependence on imported petrol and diesel, enabling both government and individuals to spend less on fuel — freeing up funds for redirection into other productive sectors of the economy.

The rise of electric vehicles can create jobs in areas such as vehicle assembly, battery-charging infrastructure, maintenance, software development, and solar power development.

A state with well-developed electric vehicle infrastructure stands to attract automobile companies, technology firms, renewable-energy investors, and related businesses.

Further benefits of the policy include reduced government spending: when official fleets run on electric vehicles, recurrent expenditure on fuel declines.

The state can also generate new revenue streams through electric vehicle registration, carbon credits, charging-station licences, and related taxes and fees.

The sector further stimulates growth in the energy sector by driving demand for stable electricity and renewable energy, while delivering meaningful social and environmental benefits — reduced air pollution, lower healthcare costs associated with respiratory illness, and reduced noise pollution making cities quieter and contributing to broader climate goals.

Taken together, these benefits diversify the economy, create opportunities, and encourage broader participation a win-win policy for government and citizens alike.

In interviews, several Permanent Secretaries reflected on their experience with the vehicles. Mr Kingsley Ndem Eyibio, Permanent Secretary, State Planning Commission, said mobility is central to his ability to deliver public services and support government activities, and that the electric vehicle has enhanced both his mobility and his effectiveness.

He noted that the vehicle lends credibility to government during official functions and demonstrates the Governor's commitment to improving the welfare of Permanent Secretaries.

He thanked the Governor and urged the administration to consider establishing dedicated maintenance and servicing centres, noting that electric vehicle technology requires specialised upkeep.

The State Statistician-General, Mrs Akedoh Okoi Edet, said she had experienced no issues with the vehicle, describing the technology as smooth and efficient. "If I have my way, Nigerians should key into this technology. It has made life very easy.

Just help me thank the Governor," she said, adding a call for greater private-sector participation in what she described as one of the administration's positive innovations.

The Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Establishments, Training and Pensions, Mr Donatus Ejemot Esu, also thanked the Governor, describing the vehicle as excellent. He noted that it has no conventional engine, does not run on petrol, and requires minimal maintenance lasting up to five days on a full charge with its two batteries.

He commended the Governor for an innovation that has helped Permanent Secretaries save on fuel costs, and noted that the vehicle's suspension is comparable to that of a Toyota Corolla.

He expressed confidence that the Governor would, in due course, facilitate the establishment of charging and maintenance stations across the state, adding that with proper care, the vehicles could serve for many years without major issues.

Mr Esu further observed that the initiative had restored the dignity and prestige of Permanent Secretaries, removing the stigma once associated with their mobility challenges.

It is fitting, once again, to commend the pioneering and enterprising spirit of the visionary Governor, His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, for placing the growth and development of Cross River State at the top of his agenda.

This appreciation extends equally to the members of the State Executive Council, whose continued unity and commitment remain vital to the state's progress. At the same time, there is a clear case for the gradual expansion of the electric vehicle programme's coverage and beneficiaries, as Cross River State positions itself as a leading state in the South-South region in this emerging area of transportation and economic development.

The Mensah Push: A New Blueprint For Environmental Renewal

By Sylvia Okoi

When Barr Bassey Offiong Mensah assumed responsibility for the Cross River State Ministry of Environment following the July 2026 cabinet reshuffle, he inherited a portfolio sitting at the intersection of public health, urban development, climate vulnerability, and sanitation — one central to the state's ambition of reclaiming its status as the cleanest state in Nigeria, a reputation it once proudly held.

Tasked with realising the Ministry's vision of becoming Nigeria's reference point in environmental standards and practice, promoting public health and socio-economic development through sustainable initiatives aimed at a circular economy — Mensah is taking the campaign for a cleaner, safer, and greener Cross River beyond rhetoric.

Though the assignment appeared daunting, the new Commissioner has, within a relatively short period, established a pattern of intervention that suggests an administration determined to move environmental management from periodic enforcement to a sustained culture of environmental responsibility.

The Commissioner's activities to date reveal a philosophy built around cleanliness, enforcement, prevention, public engagement, and partnership. Environmental sanitation has been one of Mensah's earliest and most visible priorities.

At the August 2026 statewide sanitation exercise, he personally inspected compliance and expressed concern over residents who continued trading and playing football during the restricted hours of 7:00 a.m. to 10:00 a.m.

For Mensah, sanitation cannot remain an occasional government exercise — it must become part of residents' everyday behaviour. He has challenged Cross Riverians to take personal responsibility for their surroundings, insisting that environmental cleanliness must extend beyond the monthly sanitation day, and has consistently called on residents to end indiscriminate refuse dumping and maintain clean surroundings.

That philosophy also underpins the Ministry's plans to strengthen enforcement around major markets, including the proposed deployment of mobile courts to address persistent environmental violations.

Perhaps the most visible dimension of Mensah's approach has been the renewed effort to reclaim spaces gradually taken over by informal activity.

The Commissioner led a major clean-up operation around Atimbo Roundabout, the Airport Field, IBB/Edim Otop/CUDA Junction, Etta Agbor Roundabout, and Rabana Junction, directing traders operating from tables, kiosks, POS stands, and makeshift structures on pedestrian walkways to relocate to designated markets.

The intervention was not framed merely as an aesthetic exercise: Mensah linked the obstruction of walkways to pedestrian safety, traffic congestion, and accessibility challenges for wheelchair users and others with mobility aids.

The exercise extended to government-reserved green areas as well.

At the Margaret Ekpo International Airport Field and the open space behind the airport along IBB Way, the Commissioner moved to reclaim land being used for football, food vending, refuse dumping, and burning, activities damaging the reserves' intended purpose.

The government's position, Mensah stated, is that green areas are public environmental assets, not vacant land to be appropriated at will — an important dimension of the drive to restore order while preserving Calabar's urban character.

Addressing flooding before the rains turn disastrous has been a pivotal focus of the Ministry's work under Mensah.

Cross River has been significantly affected by flooding, erosion, and landslides, prompting the Commissioner to conduct an on-the-spot inspection of environmentally vulnerable locations across Calabar Metropolis and Akpabuyo Local Government Area — including the landslide-prone Anansa area, the drainage project at WAPI Junction, and the gully erosion site at Ikot Offiong Mbiang in Akpabuyo.

The visit reflected an important shift from reactive disaster response towards identifying vulnerable areas and pursuing preventive measures.

The Ministry's collaboration with technical experts and the Nigeria Erosion and Watershed Management Project (NEWMAP) is particularly significant given the scale and technical complexity of the erosion and landslide challenges facing parts of the state.

For a city with intense rainfall, drainage is more than an infrastructure concern — it is a matter of environmental and public safety.

Mensah has placed strong emphasis on desilting drainage channels, with the Ministry ensuring that debris generated during operations is properly evacuated rather than left to return to the drains.

The Commissioner has warned that desilting without prompt evacuation would defeat the purpose of the exercise.

This approach is especially relevant as parts of Calabar continue to experience flooding linked to heavily silted drains.

The Ministry has carried out major desilting operations in Ettagbor, Watt Market, and Eight Miles, with further intervention sites under identification.

Mensah has recognised that government cannot shoulder the environmental burden alone.

During a meeting with Flour Mills of Nigeria Plc, he identified areas where private-sector organisations could support environmental sustainability through their corporate social responsibility programmes — part of a broader effort to bring CSR into environmental management.

Another key component of the emerging environmental agenda is the regulation of activities that have spilled onto public roads and pedestrian spaces.

The Commissioner has directed roadside traders around Watt Market and the Mobil/MCC axis to relocate, with the Fruit Arcade in Ikot Ishie proposed as an alternative site.

Similarly, mechanics operating without designated workshops along Bedwell, Kings, White House, and Victor Akan Streets in Calabar South have been directed to vacate the areas.

Mensah described roadside mechanic activity as an environmental nuisance that obstructs traffic and contributes to urban deterioration, calling for urgent intervention to clear the roads.

The move represents an effort to restore the distinction between commercial spaces, residential areas, traffic corridors, and environmental reserves.

Mensah's agenda has also taken institutional shape with the inauguration of a Special Environmental Task Force, mandated to enforce environmental laws and address indiscriminate waste disposal, illegal structures, street trading, and other violations. At its inauguration, the Commissioner charged members to act with integrity, dedication, and selfless service, while emphasising that enforcement must remain within the bounds of responsibility and due process.

Mensah has also engaged directly with communities affected by environmental challenges.

When representatives of Obutong Community raised concerns over worsening erosion and landslides threatening homes, roads, and livelihoods, the Commissioner assured them of government intervention and stressed the need for professional, sustainable solutions.

He also encouraged residents to avoid practices that aggravate environmental problems, including indiscriminate refuse disposal, deforestation, and construction along natural drainage channels.

This community dimension matters: many environmental problems begin at the grassroots and cannot be resolved from an office in Calabar alone.

Mensah has repeatedly linked his environmental agenda to Governor Bassey Edet Otu's vision of restoring Cross River's reputation as a clean, attractive destination and a major tourism hub.

His message since assuming office has been consistent: to return Cross River to the standard of cleanliness for which it was once known.

The early months of his tenure show a Commissioner working on several fronts simultaneously — sanitation, drainage desilting, erosion control, green-space protection, traffic and walkway management, regulation of roadside activity, enforcement, community engagement, and private-sector collaboration.

Ultimately, the measure of this renewed environmental push will not be the number of enforcement operations carried out or directives issued, but whether streets remain clean after sanitation exercises, drains stay free of refuse, green spaces are protected, flooding is reduced, and citizens come to see environmental responsibility as a shared civic duty.

Barr Bassey Offiong Mensah continues to match words with action, with a promise to sustain the momentum.

With the right institutional support, strengthened infrastructure through partnerships, and responsible citizenship, the campaign to reclaim Cross River's clean and green identity could become a lasting culture.

GOVERNMENT OF CROSS RIVER STATE, NIGERIA

September 17th, 2026

PRESS RELEASE

CROSS RIVER COMMENCES STATEWIDE DISTRIBUTION OF IMPROVED COWPEA SEEDS

The Cross River State Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation Development will commence the statewide distribution of improved SAMPEA 20-T PBR cowpea seeds, developed by the Institute for Agricultural Research (IAR), to interested farmers from Monday, September 21, 2026.

SAMPEA 20-T is an improved cowpea variety developed through agricultural research, with high genetic purity and resistance to the major pod-borer pest, Maruca vitrata. The variety is known for early maturity, improved yield performance and reduced dependence on insecticide applications compared with susceptible conventional varieties.

The intervention is aimed at increasing cowpea production, strengthening food security and improving access to nutritious food, particularly for women and children, while enhancing farmers' productivity and livelihoods.

Distribution will be carried out in collaboration with the State Chapters of the Cowpea Farmers Association and Women in Agriculture (WIA).

Interested farmers are required to proceed to their respective Local Government Councils for documentation and collection of the improved seeds.

Farmers are advised to adhere strictly to the designated collection arrangements. The seeds are solely for planting purposes and are not for human consumption.

PRESS RELEASE

EXTENSION OF THE SUSPENSION OF ALL SCRAP-RELATED ACTIVITIES IN CROSS RIVER STATE

Further to the Press Release dated the 23rd of February 2026, communicating His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu's approval of the suspension of all scrap-related activities, the Cross River State Government hereby notifies the general public that the suspension has been extended for a further period of one (1) month expiring on the 23rd August 2026.

As stated in the previous Press Release, the suspension was necessitated by the increasing incidents of vandalism, theft and destruction of public infrastructure by scavengers, scrap dealers and their agents, and the significant security threat posed to the State. This extension is intended to enable Government conclude the ongoing review of the laws, policies and regulatory framework governing scrap-related activities in Cross River State. The objective is to strengthen the regulatory regime, identify and protect legitimate operators, and implement measures that effectively prevent the infiltration of criminal elements into the sector.

Government regrets any inconvenience caused to legitimate businesses and law-abiding operators. However, the protection of public infrastructure, the preservation of public order and security remain paramount. Members of the general public are accordingly informed that the suspension remains in full force and that any person or organization found engaging in scrap-related activities in contravention of this directive shall be dealt with strictly in accordance with the law.

ADDITIONAL REMINDERS

- ✓ Avoid sudden braking and sharp turns.
- ✓ Do not overtake on wet or slippery roads.
- ✓ Pedestrians: Use walkways and cross at safe points.
- ✓ Motorcycle riders: Wear your helmet and rain gear.
- ✓ Commercial drivers: Do not overload.
- ✓ Take breaks and stay rested.

SAFE DRIVING TIPS

CHECK YOUR VEHICLE

Ensure your wipers, headlights, brake lights, tyres, brakes and windscreen are in good condition.

02

REDUCE SPEED

Wet roads reduce tyre grip. Drive within the speed limit and adjust to road and weather conditions.

03

KEEP A SAFE DISTANCE

Maintain a longer following distance. It gives you more time to react and stop safely.

04

USE YOUR LIGHTS

Switch on your headlights even during the day to improve visibility and help others see you.

05

AVOID FLOODED ROADS

Do not drive through flood water. You may not know how deep it is. Turn back or find a safer route.

06

STAY FOCUSED

Avoid distractions. Do not use your phone while driving. Keep your eyes on the road at all times.

SECTORIAL STRIDES is a special analytical column that chronicles and evaluates the achievements of the administration of Governor Bassey Edet Otu under the People First Agenda. Written by Kingsley Agim, the column takes readers beyond headlines and project commissioning ceremonies to examine the impact of government policies, programmes, and interventions across key sectors of the state's economy and public service.

Each edition will spotlight a specific sector, providing a fact-based assessment of milestones recorded by ministries, departments, and agencies, while highlighting how these achievements are improving the lives of Cross Riverians and advancing the state's development objectives.

From infrastructure and healthcare to education, agriculture, tourism, economic development, and social welfare, etc, Sectorial Strides offers a comprehensive account of the administration's journey, achievements, and legacy, one sector at a time.

The inaugural edition focuses on the Infrastructure Cluster, examining the transformative investments in roads, power, water resources, transportation, aviation, and border community development that are helping to reshape Cross River State's socio-economic landscape.

COMPLETED RENOVATION AND FURNISHING OF THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE COMPLEX, CALABAR

INFORMATION SECTOR

Gov. Otu: Repositioning Cross River's Information Sector for Transparency, Digital Governance, Global Visibility

Kingsley Agim, anipr

Information is the lifeblood of governance. It shapes public perception, inspires confidence, preserves history and connects government with the governed. Recognising this reality, Governor Bassey

Edet Otu made the revitalisation of Cross River State's information ecosystem a strategic component of his People First Agenda, transforming what had long been regarded as a routine government communication apparatus into a dynamic instrument for transparency, citizen engagement and institutional efficiency.

Three years into the administration, the information sector has emerged as one of the state's most improved sectors, recording remarkable progress in digital transformation, public communication, media relations, broadcasting, institutional strengthening and archival documentation. The reforms implemented between 2023 and 2026 have not only modernised government information management but have also significantly enhanced Cross River

State's visibility on the national and international stage.

Prior to 2023, many of the structures responsible for government information management had suffered years of neglect. Critical communication infrastructure was outdated, public engagement had diminished, digital platforms were inactive, and the Ministry of Information operated with severe manpower and technological limitations.

Governor Otu's administration responded with deliberate investments aimed at rebuilding the Ministry into a modern public communication institution capable of meeting the demands of contemporary governance.

For the first time in well over a decade, the Ministry underwent comprehensive institutional revitalisation. Modern ICT equipment was procured, digital workflows introduced, and office operations significantly improved through technology-driven systems. Equally significant was the recruitment of 20 new personnel (information officers), ending a manpower deficit that had persisted for more than 13 years and injecting fresh capacity into government information management.

These reforms improved operational efficiency while laying the foundation for a more responsive and professional information service.

Perhaps one of the administration's most visible achievements has been the deliberate repositioning of Cross River State within the national media landscape.

Under Governor Otu, the Commissioner for Information maintained consistent appearances on leading national television networks including Channels Television, AIT, ARISE News, TVC, NTA and other major platforms. These engagements provided opportunities to explain government policies, address public concerns, counter misinformation and showcase development initiatives across multiple sectors.

According to official records, Cross River's national media visibility rose dramatically from approximately 28 percent in 2022 to about 78 percent by 2025, representing one of the most significant improvements in government media presence in recent years.

Beyond publicity, the initiative strengthened transparency, improved policy communication and restored public confidence in government information.

One of the landmark achievements of the administration was the revival of the Ministry of Information's official website, www.moi.cr.gov.ng, which had remained inactive since 2015.

The restoration of the website was accompanied by the establishment of official social media platforms on Facebook, Instagram and X (formerly Twitter), creating an integrated digital communication ecosystem capable of reaching citizens both within Nigeria and across the diaspora.

These platforms now provide timely updates on government activities, policy decisions, public announcements and developmental projects, ensuring that citizens receive information directly from official sources.

Government estimates indicate that the digital platforms currently account for approximately 70 percent of the Ministry's publicity reach, with a target of increasing coverage to 95 percent by 2027 through full integration with the state's official digital platforms.

The daily publication and electronic distribution of government news bulletins to Ministries, Departments and Agencies have further strengthened real-time information dissemination and inter-agency communication.

One of the less publicised but highly significant reforms has been the restoration of official government documentation.

For years, several statutory government publications had suffered irregular production, affecting record keeping and legal documentation.

The Otu administration reversed this trend through the commercial printing and publication of Government Gazettes, White Papers, Tender Journals and all enacted state laws, including the 2025 Appropriation Law.

These publications have strengthened institutional memory, improved legal documentation, enhanced transparency and preserved important government decisions for future generations.

Similarly, the resumption and sustained production of official government bulletins since January 2023 has restored a vital information channel that had previously become inactive.

Another landmark achievement has been the revival of Giant Strides Magazine, the Ministry's flagship publication showcasing government projects, programmes and development initiatives.

The magazine, which had not been published since July 2017, resumed publication in October 2023 and has remained consistent.

Within three years, seven editions have been completed, and more than 13,000 copies have been distributed across Nigeria.

Beyond public enlightenment, the publication now serves as an enduring documentary record of the Otu administration's developmental journey and a valuable archival resource for future generations.

Governor Otu's administration also demonstrated an appreciation for strategic storytelling as a tool for investment promotion and image building.

The production and nationwide broadcast of the documentary "Governor Otu @2" represented a significant milestone in government communication.

Aired on Channels Television, AIT, ARISE News, TVC, NTA and other national networks between May and June 2025, the documentary highlighted achievements across multiple sectors, projecting Cross River State to a nationwide audience and strengthening investor confidence in the state's development agenda.

Combined with regular press briefings and sustained media engagements, these initiatives have ensured that government activities remain accessible, verifiable and visible.

While embracing digital communication, the administration equally recognised the importance of grassroots engagement.

Through sustained mass mobilisation campaigns, coordinated press releases, Information Officers deployed across Ministries, Departments and Agencies, and the Village Square Broadcast Programme, government information reached communities that traditionally had limited access to digital media.

The Village Square initiative particularly strengthened communication with traditional institutions, promoted indigenous values and ensured that government policies were explained in culturally relevant ways.

This combination of digital innovation and community engagement has significantly expanded the reach of government communication across urban and rural communities alike.

CRBC's Digital Revolution

If the Ministry of Information experienced institutional renewal, the Cross River Broadcasting Corporation underwent a complete technological transformation.

Over the last three years, CRBC evolved from a conventional broadcasting station into a modern multimedia organisation.

The Corporation introduced a fully paperless digital newsroom, enabling real-time news production and significantly improving operational efficiency.

To guarantee uninterrupted broadcasting despite Nigeria's persistent power challenges, four television and radio studios were equipped with inverter systems, virtually eliminating on-air interruptions caused by electricity outages.

Additional investments included the installation of a new 20/2-kilowatt radio transmitter, a 13KVA electrical substation, comprehensive remodelling of radio studios, reception areas, conference facilities and newsroom infrastructure, as well as the acquisition of a new operational vehicle.

These improvements have substantially enhanced staff productivity and broadcast quality.

Perhaps the most transformative achievement at CRBC has been the expansion of its audience beyond traditional terrestrial broadcasting.

Television services were migrated to satellite and Free-to-Air platforms, while Radio Garden integration enabled global online radio streaming.

The launch of the Naija TV mobile application, migration to the GOtv platform and government-supported NIGOSAT carriage services further expanded access to Cross River programming.

Today, CRBC reaches audiences across more than ten local government areas while simultaneously serving viewers and listeners across Nigeria and the international diaspora.

For the first time, Cross River's stories are being told simultaneously to local communities and global audiences.

Understanding the changing media landscape, has CRBC established a modern podcast studio through collaboration with diaspora media partners in the United States.

This initiative has opened new opportunities for digital content production while positioning the Corporation to compete within today's evolving multimedia environment.

Equally important was the expansion of indigenous language programming following the acquisition of National Broadcasting Commission thematic language licences.

Combined with tourism-focused programmes, these initiatives have strengthened cultural preservation while promoting Cross River's rich heritage to wider audiences.

Strengthening Institutional Capacity

Beyond infrastructure and technology, the administration has invested heavily in institutional development.

Participation in national fora of Information Commissioners under the Progressive Governors' Forum has enhanced intergovernmental collaboration while improving policy coordination and professional networking.

The remarkable transformation recorded in the information sector has also attracted national recognition for the Honourable Commissioner for Information, Dr. Erasmus Ekpang, whose leadership has earned him several prestigious media and public communication awards from reputable professional bodies and organizations across the country. In further affirmation of Cross River State's growing influence in public communication, the Commissioner was unanimously elected Secretary of the Forum of Commissioners for Information in All Progressives Congress (APC)-governed states, a development widely regarded as a testament to the administration's innovative communication strategy, institutional reforms and outstanding contributions to information management at both the state and national levels.

Coverage of major state ceremonies, including Democracy Day, Independence Day, Children's Day and anniversary celebrations of the People First Administration, has ensured that important moments in the state's history are professionally documented and preserved.

Meanwhile, the continued publication of over 173 editions of the Nigerian Chronicle and Weekend Chronicle has sustained the state's print media presence and enriched the historical archive of government activities.

Another significant milestone has been the near-completion of the comprehensive restoration of the Cross River State Newspaper Corporation complex, which was extensively vandalised and destroyed during the #EndSARS protests in 2020.

The rehabilitation of the corporation's facilities represents the administration's commitment to rebuilding critical public institutions and restoring the state's capacity for public information dissemination through its flagship newspapers.

In furtherance of this objective, the Otu administration has also procured modern digital printing equipment for the restoration of the Government Printing Press. When fully operational, the facility will not only guarantee greater confidentiality in the printing of sensitive government documents, gazettes, white papers and other official publications, but will also position the state to generate additional revenue through commercial printing services for public and private organisations.

These complementary investments underscore Governor Otu's broader vision of rebuilding the entire government information value chain, from content creation and documentation to printing, publishing and distribution, while strengthening institutional self-reliance, improving operational efficiency and creating new economic opportunities within the information sector.

Ultimately, the achievements recorded in the information sector extend far beyond improved publicity.

They represent the deliberate construction of an open, digitally connected and citizen-focused governance system.

Through stronger communication channels, modern broadcasting infrastructure, revitalised institutional capacity, enhanced digital engagement, improved archival systems and broader media visibility, Governor Bassey Otu has repositioned information as a strategic instrument for development rather than merely a vehicle for publicity.

The reforms have strengthened transparency, increased citizen participation, expanded access to government information and restored confidence in public communication.

Three years after assuming office, Governor Bassey Edet Otu has transformed Cross River's information sector from a largely analogue, under-resourced system into a modern, technology-driven communication ecosystem.

From reviving dormant digital platforms and modernising government documentation to repositioning CRBC for global broadcasting and restoring Cross River's voice on the national media stage, the administration has demonstrated that effective governance depends as much on how government communicates as on what it delivers.

As the state advances toward deeper digital governance, broader citizen engagement and stronger institutional transparency, the reforms implemented between 2023 and 2026 have laid a durable foundation for an information sector that is not only more efficient and innovative but also better equipped to serve the people of Cross River State in the years ahead.
