C'River NG-CARES Records N49.43bn, Sets Stage for Phase 2

By Ukongikwen Adie

Cross River State Government has inaugurated the State Steering Committee for the implementation of Nigeria Community Action for Resilience and Economic Stimulus (NG-CARES) 2.0, following the state's strong performance under the first phase of the Federal Government-World Bank intervention.

State NG-CARES Coordinator and Secretary of the new committee, Chief Henry Egbelo, disclosed that Cross

River ranked second nationally and first in the South-South under NG-CARES 1.0, recording ~~N~~49.43 billion in total earnings and ~~N~~32.52 billion in reimbursements.

Egbelo gave the figures on Tuesday at Government House, Calabar, during the inauguration of the State CARES Steering Committee by Governor Bassey Edet Otu, represented by his Deputy, Rt. Hon. Peter Odey.

He said the first phase supported vulnerable households through social protection interventions, while vulnerable youths and street sweepers were engaged under the Labour-Intensive Public Works component of the programme.

According to him, farmers across major value chains also benefited through FADAMA, while the Community and Social Development Agency implemented community infrastructure projects and eligible micro and small enterprises received grants.

Inaugurating the committee,

Governor Otu charged members to build on the gains recorded under the first phase and ensure effective implementation of NG-CARES 2.0 in the overall interest of Cross River citizens.

Represented by Deputy Governor Peter Odey, the Governor said the programme was designed to strengthen existing social safety nets, provide livelihood support and improve agricultural value chains, among other interventions aimed at strengthening the economic resilience and wellbeing of vulnerable citizens.

He commended the State NG-CARES coordinating team for its performance under the first phase and assured the newly inaugurated committee of the state government's continued support to enable it deliver on its mandate.

Otu said the choice of experienced and competent individuals for the committee reflected the administration's commitment to effective management and successful implementation of

NG-CARES 2.0 in the state.

He urged members to approach their responsibilities with diligence, accountability and a strong sense of service, particularly by ensuring that programme benefits reach the intended beneficiaries.

Responding on behalf of the committee, Commissioner for Finance and Chairman, Dr. Michael Odere, thanked the Governor for the confidence reposed in the members and pledged prudent management of resources in strict compliance with NG-CARES objectives and guidelines.

Odere also assured that the committee would uphold transparency and accountability while working to deliver effectively on its mandate and make the state proud.

Egbelo thanked the state government for its support and the enabling environment that contributed to the successful implementation of NG-CARES 1.0, saying the achievements demonstrated Cross River's capacity to deliver development interventions targeted at improving livelihoods and strengthening economic resilience.

C'River CJ Orders Etung Criminal Cases to Effraya

By Kingsley Agim

Cross River State Chief Judge, Hon. Justice Akon B. Ikpeme, has ordered the transfer of all pending criminal cases originating from Etung Local Government Area from courts in Ikom to the Etung Chief Magistrate's Court, Effraya.

Justice Ikpeme also directed that all new criminal matters arising from Etung be filed at Effraya, irrespective of the distance involved.

Contained in Chief Registrar's Circular No. 7-2026, dated June 29, 2026, the directive was signed by the

Chief Registrar,
Iquo B. Ekanem,
Esq.

It followed a complaint brought before the Chief Judge by the Legal Adviser of Etung Local Government Council, Daniel Enage Mgbe, Esq., in a letter dated June 18, 2026.

According to the circular, prosecuting agencies in Ikom had "consistently" filed criminal complaints arising from Etung in Ikom "instead of Effraya," citing distance and convenience.

Justice Ikpeme consequently directed that "all matters emanating from Etung must be filed at Effraya irrespective of distance," while matters originating from Ikom should remain in Ikom.

The directive is in line with Section 92(1) of the Cross River State Administration of Criminal Justice Law, 2016.

All Etung matters currently pending in Ikom courts are to be transferred to Etung forthwith, while subsequent cases from the area must be filed at Effraya.

According to the circular, the arrangement is intended "to keep Magistrate's Court in Etung busy and prevent redundancy."

For effective implementation, the Administrative Magistrate was mandated to ensure compliance with the directive and monitor the handling of affected cases.

Judicial officers, police authorities, prosecuting agencies and staff within the affected jurisdictions were consequently directed to take note and comply with the new filing arrangement.

The directive places Etung criminal cases firmly within the appropriate judicial division, while giving the Effraya Magistrate's Court a clearer and more active role in administering justice in the area.

Indeed, Gov Otu Has “Failed”!

PART (1)

By Linus Obogo

I cannot agree more with the factional PDP support group in Cross River and, indeed, its factional governorship candidate that Governor Bassey Otu has “failed”! He has failed, monumentally, the most rigorous examination apparently known to contemporary opposition politics in Cross River — the Commissioning Ceremony Test.

By this extraordinary new standard of public administration, it matters little whether a road exists, whether a bridge carries traffic, whether a hospital functions, whether a school is safe or whether a community can finally sleep without fear.

The decisive question is much simpler: Has somebody cut a ribbon? If not, the project apparently does not exist.

Thus, a road connecting previously isolated communities is a mirage until the Governor arrives with scissors.

A bridge carrying farmers, traders, schoolchildren and patients across a river remains a "white elephant" until a plaque is unveiled.

A renovated health facility is presumably still dilapidated if there was no photographer present when the paint dried.

And a measurable improvement in security is apparently worthless unless accompanied by a parade, a podium, a bouquet and the obligatory photograph of political dignitaries smiling beneath a banner.

Yes, Governor Otu has indeed "failed".

He must therefore be told, in the strongest possible language, that in this new opposition catechism, the commissioning ceremony has become more important than the commission itself; the photograph more valuable than the project; the ribbon more consequential than the road.

This must be a fascinating theory of development, and perhaps the first in which scissors have acquired greater developmental significance than bulldozers.

But beneath the satire is a serious question: what exactly should constitute evidence of governance?

By the May 29, 2025 anniversary address, the Otu administration had had more than 80 kilometres of roads constructed or rehabilitated, while the broader road-and-bridge portfolio was estimated at about 200 kilometres.

Whatever reasonable dispute may exist over figures, quality, completion or cost, the underlying reality cannot be wished away by partisan rhetoric: infrastructure interventions have been undertaken across communities that had endured years of neglect.

Roads around Ukelle, Nfom, Okpoma and adjoining communities have witnessed renewed intervention.

The administration commenced the 10-kilometre Ndok Junction–Mbube–Okubushuyu Road in 2025. The long-abandoned Adiabo–Ikoneto corridor, including difficult bridge sections, is being constructed.

In Bekwarra, work around the Ochagbe, Afrike–Ugboro

Junction and the East-West Boki corridor forms part of the wider effort to reconnect communities.

The Oban–Nsan Road in Akamkpa, stretching approximately 29.87 kilometres and currently under construction, belongs to the same infrastructure story.

Now, perhaps the opposition would prefer that none of these roads count until the Governor has stood at each location, scissors in hand, while a brass band performs the appropriate fanfare. But there is a small problem with that theory.

The farmer does not drive to the commissioning ground.

He drives on the road.

The trader does not sell the commissioning photograph. She sells her goods.

The student does not cross the bridge because a plaque has been unveiled. The student crosses it because the bridge is there.

The patient does not recover because a government delegation commissioned a clinic. The patient benefits because the clinic functions. That is the inconvenient difference between governance and political theatre.

Gov Otu's People-first Agenda In Cross River: Rural Roads, Healthcare, Tourism And Feedback

By Ukongikwen Adie Nzuanke

There is a point in governance when promises must move beyond campaign rhetoric to take physical shape in the lives of citizens.

Recent developments in Bekwarra, Ogoja and Obudu Local Government Areas in the Northern Senatorial District offer a glimpse into efforts to make that transition under Governor Bassey Otu's administration.

From a 10-kilometre rural road in Bekwarra, to a 40-bed hospital in Idum-Mbube and renewed efforts to reposition the Obudu Ranch Resort as an international tourism destination, an emerging pattern of development built around connectivity, welfare, economic opportunity and investment is taking shape.

The flag-off of the 10-kilometre Ugboro–Ukpah–Afrike Road in Bekwarra represents more than just another road project. For communities along the corridor, the road has the potential to transform their economic fortunes.

Representing Governor Otu at the flag-off, Deputy Governor Peter Odey described the project as another milestone in the implementation of the administration's People First agenda.

According to him, the road will improve access to rural communities, facilitate the movement of agricultural produce, stimulate commerce, strengthen access to healthcare and education, and create new economic opportunities.

Odey urged the contractor to engage qualified local labour and source materials locally where practicable, while calling on community leaders and youths to support the contractor and create an environment conducive to timely completion.

In appreciation, the Executive Chairman of Bekwarra LGA, Hon. Egbung Odama, described Governor Otu as a promise-keeper and welcomed the intervention as a response to a long-standing infrastructural need.

In Idum-Mbube, Ogoja Local Government Area, Deputy Governor Odey performed the groundbreaking for the 40-bed Oturikang Hospital, an initiative established through his personal intervention.

He described the project as more than a ceremonial groundbreaking, assuring residents that construction would commence immediately.

The facility is intended to provide quality, accessible healthcare to residents of Idum and neighbouring communities, reducing the burden of travelling long distances for medical attention.

The Deputy Governor also committed ₦100 million towards commencement of construction.

The intervention is significant because it combines public leadership with personal philanthropy and community development. Traditional authorities in Idum welcomed the initiative, describing it as capable of making a direct difference in the lives of residents.

At the same ceremony, Dr. Odey, who is also Lekwel E' Mbe 1 of Mbube, reiterated the state government's commitment to ongoing infrastructure projects, including the Ndok-Mbube Road and the proposed extension towards Utugwang.

The message from the community was therefore not simply gratitude for one project, but an expectation that individual interventions would become part of a wider development corridor linking roads, healthcare, commerce and communities. Perhaps nowhere is the administration's ambition for economic transformation more visible than in Obudu.

During a banquet in honour of Foreign Defence Advisers and Defence Attachés visiting Cross River State, Deputy Governor Odey used the occasion to articulate the state's tourism and investment position.

His message was straightforward: Cross River's natural endowments should not merely be admired; they should be converted into sustainable economic opportunities.

The administration's effort to revitalise and reposition the Obudu Ranch Resort as a world-class tourism destination is part of a larger economic strategy.

Tourism has the potential to generate employment, stimulate hospitality and transportation businesses, attract investment and increase Cross River's visibility beyond Nigeria.

Odey also linked tourism development to peace and security, presenting Cross River as a peaceful and secure environment capable of supporting investment and international engagement.

The presence of Foreign Defence Advisers and Defence Attachés at Obudu provided an unusual but important diplomatic opportunity.

The state was able to showcase its tourism assets while simultaneously presenting its security environment and investment potential.

The delegation's programme included a guided tour of the resort, cultural displays, a bonfire ceremony and presentation of souvenirs.

The Chief of Defence Intelligence, Lt. Gen. Emmanuel Parker Undiandeye, represented by Major General Ojogbane Adegbe, said the visit was designed to expose the foreign defence representatives to Nigeria's geography, culture, security environment and development priorities.

That convergence of tourism and international engagement is important.

For Cross River State, the objective is no longer simply to attract tourists for short visits. The larger ambition is to build a destination capable of attracting investment, partnerships and sustained economic activity.

The tourism conversation also reinforces security as a pillar of Governor Otu's development strategy.

By emphasising Cross River's peaceful environment before an international audience, the administration effectively presented security as part of the state's economic infrastructure.

That is a strategic shift in how development is understood. Security is not merely a law-and-order issue; it is a prerequisite for tourism, agriculture, commerce and investment.

At the centre of several of these engagements is Deputy Governor Rt. Hon. Dr. Peter Agbe Odey, whose public interventions have increasingly provided a window into the administration's broader development philosophy.

As Deputy Governor, Odey

has represented Governor Otu at major projects and diplomatic engagements, but his interventions have also increasingly reflected a distinct emphasis on community participation, local content and direct human impact.

At Bekwarra, the emphasis was on opening up rural communities and strengthening economic activity.

At Idum-Mbube, it was healthcare and personal investment in community welfare.

At Obudu, the emphasis shifted to tourism, international partnerships, security and investment.

Similarly, Governor

Otu reaffirmed that public feedback remains an indispensable pillar of good governance, describing citizens' participation as critical to building a responsive, accountable and people-centred government.

The Governor's position was conveyed by Deputy Governor Odey, who represented him at the Public Advocacy Summit themed, "The Role of the People in the People's Government: Institutionalizing the Feedback Mechanism," organised by the Special Adviser to the Governor on Content Development and Archiving.

Declaring the summit open at the Metropolitan Hotel, Calabar, Odey said the People First administration recognises public feedback as a vital instrument for shaping policies and programmes, stressing that governance is most effective when it reflects the aspirations and concerns of the people.

He noted that democracy extends beyond the electoral process, stressing that continuous engagement between government and citizens fosters trust, accountability and inclusive development, while describing the People First mantra as a deliberate commitment to placing the welfare of Cross Riverians at the heart of governance.

He emphasised that the voice of the people remains a key measure of purposeful leadership, noting that the administration consistently reviews its policies in response to citizens' feedback.

He therefore encouraged political office holders to sustain regular town hall meetings to remain connected to the needs and aspirations of the people.

The common denominator in all these engagements is PEOPLE.

That consistency is important because development is rarely achieved through isolated projects.

Healthcare facilities require roads to connect the communities they serve.

Tourism requires roads, security and hospitality infrastructure. Agriculture requires access roads to markets. Investment requires stability. Governor Otu's development philosophy appears increasingly anchored on a simple proposition: put people at the centre, build the infrastructure that connects them to opportunities, invest in their welfare, and create conditions for private enterprise and international partnerships to flourish.

GOVERNMENT OF CROSS RIVER STATE, NIGERIA
MINISTRY OF WATER RESOURCES
OFFICE OF THE HONOURABLE COMMISSIONER

Ref:CR/MWR/

Date: 21st September, 2026.

PRESS STATEMENT:

STRICT IMPLEMENTATION OF WASH POLICY REGULATIONS IN CROSS RIVER STATE

The Cross River State Government wishes to formally notify all Borehole Drilling Companies, Water Service Providers, Consultants, developers, Institutions, Communities, Households and relevant stakeholders that it is commencing the strict implementation and enforcement of all existing Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) policy regulations governing groundwater development and water supply services across the Eighteen Local Government Areas of the State.

The State Government has observed with grave concern the increasing rate of indiscriminate Borehole drilling, operation of unregistered Water Service Providers, non-compliance with established technical standards, and the proliferation of unsafe water infrastructure in many parts of the State. These practice poses serious risks to public health, groundwater resources, environmental sustainability, and the welfare of citizens in general.

Government further wishes to place on record that access to safe and clean water is a fundamental right of every citizen. However, this right can only be guaranteed when water supply systems are developed and managed in accordance with approved standards and regulatory requirements. The era where individuals and companies operated without accountability in the water sector in the State is over.

Consequently, the Cross River State Government through the Ministry of Water Resources, in collaboration with relevant Regulatory Agencies and Stakeholders, shall immediately intensify implementation, monitoring, inspection, compliance verification, and enforcement activities throughout the State.

All Borehole Service Providers are hereby directed to comply with the following requirements:

Mandatory Registration and Licensing:

No individual, company, or organization shall engage in borehole drilling, rehabilitation, water supply installation, or related services without registration and licensing by the Cross River State Ministry of Water Resources.

Mandatory Permit and Authorization:

No borehole project shall commence without prior approval, permit, or authorization from the Ministry of Water Resources.

Compliance with Technical Standards:

All proposed boreholes projects must undergo the required geophysical and geological investigations before drilling.

Appropriate drilling methods, approved materials, well casing, grouting procedures, and water quality standards must be strictly adhered to.
Water quality testing shall be mandatory before commissioning and utilisation of any borehole facility.

Submission of Drilling Records:

All Operators must maintain and submit drilling logs, completion reports, pumping test records, and other relevant technical documentation as may be required by the Ministry.

Environmental Protection Measures:

All Service Providers must ensure environmentally responsible drilling practices and safe disposal of drilling waste to prevent pollution of groundwater and surrounding ecosystems.

The Government further directs all residents, institutions, schools, hospitals, hotels, industries, estate developers, and community organizations to engage only licensed and approved Borehole Service Providers. Citizens are encouraged to demand evidence of registration, permits, and water quality certification before making any payment for borehole services.

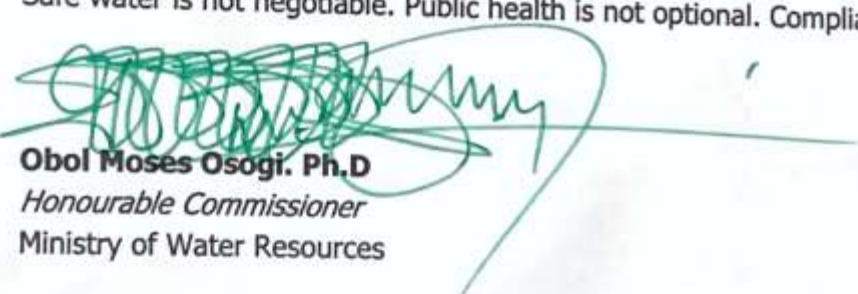

In this regard, the Government wishes to point out that Enforcement Teams shall be deployed across the State to identify and prosecute defaulters. Any individual or organization found drilling boreholes without authorization, operating without registration, violating established standards, falsifying records, or compromising public water safety standard shall face the full weight of the law, including sanctions, closure of operations, fines, and prosecution where applicable.

This exercise is not intended to frustrate legitimate businesses; rather, it is aimed at sanitizing the sector, protecting consumers, promoting professionalism, preserving groundwater resources, and ensuring that every citizen has access to safe and potable water.

The Government remains committed to achieving universal access to clean water and sanitation in line with national WASH objectives and Sustainable Development Goal 6. Such goals can only be realized through collective responsibilities, strict compliance, and effective enforcement.

The message is simple and unequivocal: all Borehole Service Providers must comply with WASH regulations or face the consequences of non-compliance.

Safe water is not negotiable. Public health is not optional. Compliance is mandatory.

The Frontier Shield: How Cross River Is Restructuring Its Livestock Empire From The Borders Out

By Arit Ubi

At the quiet edge of Etung Local Government Area, along the lush corridor of Cross River State, a long-standing vulnerability in West African agriculture is finally being dismantled.

For decades, open borders meant invisible risks: thousands of cattle, goats and sheep moving across regional boundaries largely unchecked, carrying the silent threat of transboundary animal diseases. Today, that vulnerability meets a high-tech wall of biosecurity.

The Federal Government has officially commissioned Nigeria's inaugural Border Animal Holding and Quarantine Facility in Nfum, Ajaso Clan.

Built under the World Bank-assisted Livestock Productivity and Resilience Support (L-PRES) Project, the state-of-the-art complex marks a tangible milestone in President Bola Ahmed Tinubu's Renewed Hope Agenda for the newly established Federal Ministry of Livestock Development.

Commissioning the complex, the Minister of Livestock Development, Dr. Idi Mukhtar Maiha, framed the Nfum site not merely as physical infrastructure, but as a structural turning point.

"This facility demonstrates the Federal Government's commitment to transforming Nigeria's livestock industry into a modern, resilient, productive and globally competitive sector," Dr. Maiha emphasised.

Every head of livestock crossing through the Nfum corridor will now undergo a strict diagnostic protocol: entry reception, temporary quarantine, health inspection, documentation and biosecurity certification before gaining entry into the domestic market.

The Nfum facility is merely the vanguard.

Dr. Maiha revealed that it is the first of 12 international border animal holding and quarantine centres slated for construction across Nigeria's strategic livestock corridors, with upcoming sites earmarked for Adamawa, Borno, Yobe, Jigawa, Kano, Sokoto, Niger and Kebbi States.

Conceived under the Innovation and Institutional Systems Strengthening component of the World Bank-supported L-PRES Project, the facility directly supports the statutory mandate of the Nigeria Agricultural Quarantine Service (NAQS).

According to Dr. Sanusi Abubakar, National Coordinator of the L-PRES Project, the vision extends well beyond basic quarantine.

It involves geospatial tracking — integrating technology to provide pastoral advisory services and map herds — and traceability integration that generates critical entry data for rapid response to regional disease outbreaks.

Aligning with Governor Bassey Otu's People First Agenda, the strategic siting of the facility in Cross River State underscores the powerful alignment between federal priorities and the state government's vision.

Representing the Governor, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, the Secretary to the State Government, Prof. Anthony Owan-Enoh, commended the Federal Government for locating the landmark project in Cross River and assured federal authorities of the state's total commitment to protecting the investment.

Crucial to this partnership is Governor Otu's People First Agenda, which places heavy emphasis on gender-responsive development, social inclusion and economic empowerment.

As Cross River continues to expand opportunities across all socio-economic sectors, the new facility is positioned to stimulate border-community commerce, creating sustainable, gender-inclusive livelihoods for livestock traders, women entrepreneurs and local workers.

At the operational helm in Cross River State, state-level project execution and professional veterinary oversight are unified under the single leadership of Dr. Undiandeye Jude.

Serving concurrently as the Director of Veterinary Services in the Ministry of Livestock, Aquaculture and Fisheries Development and the State Project Coordinator for the L-PRES Project, Dr. Undiandeye directly bridges local World Bank project implementation with state veterinary biosecurity.

Dr. Undiandeye identified transboundary animal diseases as one of the most persistent threats confronting Nigeria's livestock sector.

Leveraging his dual mandate, he outlined key strategies to ensure long-term operational impact, including directing both state L-PRES implementation and veterinary regulatory checks to ensure seamless disease interdiction and border biosecurity.

While the commissioning marks an unprecedented leap forward, operational leaders are already focused on scaling the site to maximum capacity.

Speaking on behalf of the Comptroller-General of NAQS, Dr. Vincent Isegbe, Assistant Comptroller-General Dr. Tekla Ekechukwu highlighted key expansion requirements, including full perimeter fencing, enhanced grid integration and sustained supplies of specialised veterinary chemicals.

Echoing these points, the Executive Chairman of Etung LGA and the Paramount Ruler of Etung, His Royal Majesty Ambassador Anthony Ntui Etta, who facilitated the initial three-hectare land donation, urged the inclusion of local host-community youths and women in operational staffing to promote genuine community ownership.

As regional commerce under the African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA) accelerates, the Nfum facility establishes a clear standard: Nigeria is securing its borders, protecting its food systems and building an inclusive, modern livestock supply chain ready for the global stage.

The Mensah Push: A New Blueprint For Environmental Renewal

By Sylvia Okoi

When Barr Bassey Offiong Mensah assumed responsibility for the Cross River State Ministry of Environment following the July 2026 cabinet reshuffle, he inherited a portfolio sitting at the intersection of public health, urban development, climate vulnerability, and sanitation — one central to the state's ambition of reclaiming its status as the cleanest state in Nigeria, a reputation it once proudly held.

Tasked with realising the Ministry's vision of becoming Nigeria's reference point in environmental standards and practice, promoting public health and socio-economic development through sustainable initiatives aimed at a circular economy — Mensah is taking the campaign for a cleaner, safer, and greener Cross River beyond rhetoric.

Though the assignment appeared daunting, the new Commissioner has, within a relatively short period, established a pattern of intervention that suggests an administration determined to move environmental management from periodic enforcement to a sustained culture of environmental responsibility.

The Commissioner's activities to date reveal a philosophy built around cleanliness, enforcement, prevention, public engagement, and partnership. Environmental sanitation has been one of Mensah's earliest and most visible priorities.

At the August 2026 statewide sanitation exercise, he personally inspected compliance and expressed concern over residents who continued trading and playing football during the restricted hours of 7:00 a.m. to 10:00 a.m.

For Mensah, sanitation cannot remain an occasional government exercise — it must become part of residents' everyday behaviour. He has challenged Cross Riverians to take personal responsibility for their surroundings, insisting that environmental cleanliness must extend beyond the monthly sanitation day, and has consistently called on residents to end indiscriminate refuse dumping and maintain clean surroundings.

That philosophy also underpins the Ministry's plans to strengthen enforcement around major markets, including the proposed deployment of mobile courts to address persistent environmental violations.

Perhaps the most visible dimension of Mensah's approach has been the renewed effort to reclaim spaces gradually taken over by informal activity.

The Commissioner led a major clean-up operation around Atimbo Roundabout, the Airport Field, IBB/Edim Otop/CUDA Junction, Etta Agbor Roundabout, and Rabana Junction, directing traders operating from tables, kiosks, POS stands, and makeshift structures on pedestrian walkways to relocate to designated markets.

The intervention was not framed merely as an aesthetic exercise: Mensah linked the obstruction of walkways to pedestrian safety, traffic congestion, and accessibility challenges for wheelchair users and others with mobility aids.

The exercise extended to government-reserved green areas as well.

At the Margaret Ekpo International Airport Field and the open space behind the airport along IBB Way, the Commissioner moved to reclaim land being used for football, food vending, refuse dumping, and burning, activities damaging the reserves' intended purpose.

The government's position, Mensah stated, is that green areas are public environmental assets, not vacant land to be appropriated at will — an important dimension of the drive to restore order while preserving Calabar's urban character.

Addressing flooding before the rains turn disastrous has been a pivotal focus of the Ministry's work under Mensah.

Cross River has been significantly affected by flooding, erosion, and landslides, prompting the Commissioner to conduct an on-the-spot inspection of environmentally vulnerable locations across Calabar Metropolis and Akpabuyo Local Government Area — including the landslide-prone Anansa area, the drainage project at WAPI Junction, and the gully erosion site at Ikot Offiong Mbiang in Akpabuyo.

The visit reflected an important shift from reactive disaster response towards identifying vulnerable areas and pursuing preventive measures.

The Ministry's collaboration with technical experts and the Nigeria Erosion and Watershed Management Project (NEWMAP) is particularly significant given the scale and technical complexity of the erosion and landslide challenges facing parts of the state.

For a city with intense rainfall, drainage is more than an infrastructure concern — it is a matter of environmental and public safety.

Mensah has placed strong emphasis on desilting drainage channels, with the Ministry ensuring that debris generated during operations is properly evacuated rather than left to return to the drains.

The Commissioner has warned that desilting without prompt evacuation would defeat the purpose of the exercise.

This approach is especially relevant as parts of Calabar continue to experience flooding linked to heavily silted drains.

The Ministry has carried out major desilting operations in Ettagbor, Watt Market, and Eight Miles, with further intervention sites under identification.

Mensah has recognised that government cannot shoulder the environmental burden alone.

During a meeting with Flour Mills of Nigeria Plc, he identified areas where private-sector organisations could support environmental sustainability through their corporate social responsibility programmes — part of a broader effort to bring CSR into environmental management.

Another key component of the emerging environmental agenda is the regulation of activities that have spilled onto public roads and pedestrian spaces.

The Commissioner has directed roadside traders around Watt Market and the Mobil/MCC axis to relocate, with the Fruit Arcade in Ikot Ishie proposed as an alternative site.

Similarly, mechanics operating without designated workshops along Bedwell, Kings, White House, and Victor Akan Streets in Calabar South have been directed to vacate the areas.

Mensah described roadside mechanic activity as an environmental nuisance that obstructs traffic and contributes to urban deterioration, calling for urgent intervention to clear the roads.

The move represents an effort to restore the distinction between commercial spaces, residential areas, traffic corridors, and environmental reserves.

Mensah's agenda has also taken institutional shape with the inauguration of a Special Environmental Task Force, mandated to enforce environmental laws and address indiscriminate waste disposal, illegal structures, street trading, and other violations. At its inauguration, the Commissioner charged members to act with integrity, dedication, and selfless service, while emphasising that enforcement must remain within the bounds of responsibility and due process.

Mensah has also engaged directly with communities affected by environmental challenges.

When representatives of Obutong Community raised concerns over worsening erosion and landslides threatening homes, roads, and livelihoods, the Commissioner assured them of government intervention and stressed the need for professional, sustainable solutions.

He also encouraged residents to avoid practices that aggravate environmental problems, including indiscriminate refuse disposal, deforestation, and construction along natural drainage channels.

This community dimension matters: many environmental problems begin at the grassroots and cannot be resolved from an office in Calabar alone.

Mensah has repeatedly linked his environmental agenda to Governor Bassey Edet Otu's vision of restoring Cross River's reputation as a clean, attractive destination and a major tourism hub.

His message since assuming office has been consistent: to return Cross River to the standard of cleanliness for which it was once known.

The early months of his tenure show a Commissioner working on several fronts simultaneously — sanitation, drainage desilting, erosion control, green-space protection, traffic and walkway management, regulation of roadside activity, enforcement, community engagement, and private-sector collaboration.

Ultimately, the measure of this renewed environmental push will not be the number of enforcement operations carried out or directives issued, but whether streets remain clean after sanitation exercises, drains stay free of refuse, green spaces are protected, flooding is reduced, and citizens come to see environmental responsibility as a shared civic duty.

Barr Bassey Offiong Mensah continues to match words with action, with a promise to sustain the momentum.

With the right institutional support, strengthened infrastructure through partnerships, and responsible citizenship, the campaign to reclaim Cross River's clean and green identity could become a lasting culture.

CROSS RIVER COMMENCES STATEWIDE DISTRIBUTION OF IMPROVED COWPEA SEEDS

The Cross River State Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation Development will commence the statewide distribution of improved SAMPEA 20-T PBR cowpea seeds, developed by the Institute for Agricultural Research (IAR), to interested farmers from Monday, September 21, 2026.

SAMPEA 20-T is an improved cowpea variety developed through agricultural research, with high genetic purity and resistance to the major pod-borer pest, Maruca vitrata. The variety is known for early maturity, improved yield performance and reduced dependence on insecticide applications compared with susceptible conventional varieties.

The intervention is aimed at increasing cowpea production, strengthening food security and improving access to nutritious food, particularly for women and children, while enhancing farmers' productivity and livelihoods.

Distribution will be carried out in collaboration with the State Chapters of the Cowpea Farmers Association and Women in Agriculture (WIA).

Interested farmers are required to proceed to their respective Local Government Councils for documentation and collection of the improved seeds.

Farmers are advised to adhere strictly to the designated collection arrangements. The seeds are solely for planting purposes and are not for human consumption.

SECTORIAL STRIDES is a special analytical column that chronicles and evaluates the achievements of the administration of Governor Bassey Edet Otu under the People First Agenda. Written by Kingsley Agim, the column takes readers beyond headlines and project commissioning ceremonies to examine the impact of government policies, programmes, and interventions across key sectors of the state's economy and public service.

Each edition will spotlight a specific sector, providing a fact-based assessment of milestones recorded by ministries, departments, and agencies, while highlighting how these achievements are improving the lives of Cross Riverians and advancing the state's development objectives.

From infrastructure and healthcare to education, agriculture, tourism, economic development, and social welfare, etc, Sectorial Strides offers a comprehensive account of the administration's journey, achievements, and legacy, one sector at a time.

The inaugural edition focuses on the Infrastructure Cluster, examining the transformative investments in roads, power, water resources, transportation, aviation, and border community development that are helping to reshape Cross River State's socio-economic landscape.

INFORMATION SECTOR

Gov. Otu: Repositioning Cross River's Information Sector for Transparency, Digital Governance, Global Visibility

Kingsley Agim, anipr

Information is the lifeblood of governance. It shapes public perception, inspires confidence, preserves history and connects government with the governed. Recognising this reality, Governor Bassey

Edet Otu made the revitalisation of Cross River State's information ecosystem a strategic component of his People First Agenda, transforming what had long been regarded as a routine government communication apparatus into a dynamic instrument for transparency, citizen engagement and institutional efficiency.

Three years into the administration, the information sector has emerged as one of the state's most improved sectors, recording remarkable progress in digital transformation, public communication, media relations, broadcasting, institutional strengthening and archival documentation. The reforms implemented between 2023 and 2026 have not only modernised government information management but have also significantly enhanced Cross River

State's visibility on the national and international stage.

Prior to 2023, many of the structures responsible for government information management had suffered years of neglect. Critical communication infrastructure was outdated, public engagement had diminished, digital platforms were inactive, and the Ministry of Information operated with severe manpower and technological limitations.

Governor Otu's administration responded with deliberate investments aimed at rebuilding the Ministry into a modern public communication institution capable of meeting the demands of contemporary governance.

For the first time in well over a decade, the Ministry underwent comprehensive institutional revitalisation. Modern ICT equipment was procured, digital workflows introduced, and office operations significantly improved through technology-driven systems. Equally significant was the recruitment of 20 new personnel (information officers), ending a manpower deficit that had persisted for more than 13 years and injecting fresh capacity into government information management.

These reforms improved operational efficiency while laying the foundation for a more responsive and professional information service.

Perhaps one of the administration's most visible achievements has been the deliberate repositioning of Cross River State within the national media landscape.

Under Governor Otu, the Commissioner for Information maintained consistent appearances on leading national television networks including Channels Television, AIT, ARISE News, TVC, NTA and other major platforms. These engagements provided opportunities to explain government policies, address public concerns, counter misinformation and showcase development initiatives across multiple sectors.

According to official records, Cross River's national media visibility rose dramatically from approximately 28 percent in 2022 to about 78 percent by 2025, representing one of the most significant improvements in government media presence in recent years.

Beyond publicity, the initiative strengthened transparency, improved policy communication and restored public confidence in government information.

One of the landmark achievements of the administration was the revival of the Ministry of Information's official website, www.moi.cr.gov.ng, which had remained inactive since 2015.

The restoration of the website was accompanied by the establishment of official social media platforms on Facebook, Instagram and X (formerly Twitter), creating an integrated digital communication ecosystem capable of reaching citizens both within Nigeria and across the diaspora.

These platforms now provide timely updates on government activities, policy decisions, public announcements and developmental projects, ensuring that citizens receive information directly from official sources.

Government estimates indicate that the digital platforms currently account for approximately 70 percent of the Ministry's publicity reach, with a target of increasing coverage to 95 percent by 2027 through full integration with the state's official digital platforms.

The daily publication and electronic distribution of government news bulletins to Ministries, Departments and Agencies have further strengthened real-time information dissemination and inter-agency communication.

One of the less publicised but highly significant reforms has been the restoration of official government documentation.

For years, several statutory government publications had suffered irregular production, affecting record keeping and legal documentation.

The Otu administration reversed this trend through the commercial printing and publication of Government Gazettes, White Papers, Tender Journals and all enacted state laws, including the 2025 Appropriation Law.

These publications have strengthened institutional memory, improved legal documentation, enhanced transparency and preserved important government decisions for future generations.

Similarly, the resumption and sustained production of official government bulletins since January 2023 has restored a vital information channel that had previously become inactive.

Another landmark achievement has been the revival of Giant Strides Magazine, the Ministry's flagship publication showcasing government projects, programmes and development initiatives.

The magazine, which had not been published since July 2017, resumed publication in October 2023 and has remained consistent.

Within three years, seven editions have been completed, and more than 13,000 copies have been distributed across Nigeria.

Beyond public enlightenment, the publication now serves as an enduring documentary record of the Otu administration's developmental journey and a valuable archival resource for future generations.

Governor Otu's administration also demonstrated an appreciation for strategic storytelling as a tool for investment promotion and image building.

The production and nationwide broadcast of the documentary "Governor Otu @2" represented a significant milestone in government communication.

Aired on Channels Television, AIT, ARISE News, TVC, NTA and other national networks between May and June 2025, the documentary highlighted achievements across multiple sectors, projecting Cross River State to a nationwide audience and strengthening investor confidence in the state's development agenda.

Combined with regular press briefings and sustained media engagements, these initiatives have ensured that government activities remain accessible, verifiable and visible.

While embracing digital communication, the administration equally recognised the importance of grassroots engagement.

Through sustained mass mobilisation campaigns, coordinated press releases, Information Officers deployed across Ministries, Departments and Agencies, and the Village Square Broadcast Programme, government information reached communities that traditionally had limited access to digital media.

The Village Square initiative particularly strengthened communication with traditional institutions, promoted indigenous values and ensured that government policies were explained in culturally relevant ways.

This combination of digital innovation and community engagement has significantly expanded the reach of government communication across urban and rural communities alike.

CRBC's Digital Revolution

If the Ministry of Information experienced institutional renewal, the Cross River Broadcasting Corporation underwent a complete technological transformation.

Over the last three years, CRBC evolved from a conventional broadcasting station into a modern multimedia organisation.

The Corporation introduced a fully paperless digital newsroom, enabling real-time news production and significantly improving operational efficiency.

To guarantee uninterrupted broadcasting despite Nigeria's persistent power challenges, four television and radio studios were equipped with inverter systems, virtually eliminating on-air interruptions caused by electricity outages.

Additional investments included the installation of a new 20/2-kilowatt radio transmitter, a 13KVA electrical substation, comprehensive remodelling of radio studios, reception areas, conference facilities and newsroom infrastructure, as well as the acquisition of a new operational vehicle.

These improvements have substantially enhanced staff productivity and broadcast quality.

Perhaps the most transformative achievement at CRBC has been the expansion of its audience beyond traditional terrestrial broadcasting.

Television services were migrated to satellite and Free-to-Air platforms, while Radio Garden integration enabled global online radio streaming.

The launch of the Naija TV mobile application, migration to the GOtv platform and government-supported NIGOSAT carriage services further expanded access to Cross River programming.

Today, CRBC reaches audiences across more than ten local government areas while simultaneously serving viewers and listeners across Nigeria and the international diaspora.

For the first time, Cross River's stories are being told simultaneously to local communities and global audiences.

Understanding the changing media landscape, has CRBC established a modern podcast studio through collaboration with diaspora media partners in the United States.

This initiative has opened new opportunities for digital content production while positioning the Corporation to compete within today's evolving multimedia environment.

Equally important was the expansion of indigenous language programming following the acquisition of National Broadcasting Commission thematic language licences.

Combined with tourism-focused programmes, these initiatives have strengthened cultural preservation while promoting Cross River's rich heritage to wider audiences.

Strengthening Institutional Capacity

Beyond infrastructure and technology, the administration has invested heavily in institutional development.

Participation in national fora of Information Commissioners under the Progressive Governors' Forum has enhanced intergovernmental collaboration while improving policy coordination and professional networking.

The remarkable transformation recorded in the information sector has also attracted national recognition for the Honourable Commissioner for Information, Dr. Erasmus Ekpang, whose leadership has earned him several prestigious media and public communication awards from reputable professional bodies and organizations across the country. In further affirmation of Cross River State's growing influence in public communication, the Commissioner was unanimously elected Secretary of the Forum of Commissioners for Information in All Progressives Congress (APC)-governed states, a development widely regarded as a testament to the administration's innovative communication strategy, institutional reforms and outstanding contributions to information management at both the state and national levels.

Coverage of major state ceremonies, including Democracy Day, Independence Day, Children's Day and anniversary celebrations of the People First Administration, has ensured that important moments in the state's history are professionally documented and preserved.

Meanwhile, the continued publication of over 173 editions of the Nigerian Chronicle and Weekend Chronicle has sustained the state's print media presence and enriched the historical archive of government activities.

Another significant milestone has been the near-completion of the comprehensive restoration of the Cross River State Newspaper Corporation complex, which was extensively vandalised and destroyed during the #EndSARS protests in 2020.

The rehabilitation of the corporation's facilities represents the administration's commitment to rebuilding critical public institutions and restoring the state's capacity for public information dissemination through its flagship newspapers.

In furtherance of this objective, the Otu administration has also procured modern digital printing equipment for the restoration of the Government Printing Press. When fully operational, the facility will not only guarantee greater confidentiality in the printing of sensitive government documents, gazettes, white papers and other official publications, but will also position the state to generate additional revenue through commercial printing services for public and private organisations.

These complementary investments underscore Governor Otu's broader vision of rebuilding the entire government information value chain, from content creation and documentation to printing, publishing and distribution, while strengthening institutional self-reliance, improving operational efficiency and creating new economic opportunities within the information sector.

Ultimately, the achievements recorded in the information sector extend far beyond improved publicity.

They represent the deliberate construction of an open, digitally connected and citizen-focused governance system.

Through stronger communication channels, modern broadcasting infrastructure, revitalised institutional capacity, enhanced digital engagement, improved archival systems and broader media visibility, Governor Bassey Otu has repositioned information as a strategic instrument for development rather than merely a vehicle for publicity.

The reforms have strengthened transparency, increased citizen participation, expanded access to government information and restored confidence in public communication.

Three years after assuming office, Governor Bassey Edet Otu has transformed Cross River's information sector from a largely analogue, under-resourced system into a modern, technology-driven communication ecosystem.

From reviving dormant digital platforms and modernising government documentation to repositioning CRBC for global broadcasting and restoring Cross River's voice on the national media stage, the administration has demonstrated that effective governance depends as much on how government communicates as on what it delivers.

As the state advances toward deeper digital governance, broader citizen engagement and stronger institutional transparency, the reforms implemented between 2023 and 2026 have laid a durable foundation for an information sector that is not only more efficient and innovative but also better equipped to serve the people of Cross River State in the years ahead.
