A TRIBUTE TO HIS EXCELLENCY,
SENATOR PRINCE
BASSEY EDET OTU
ON HIS 67TH BIRTHDAY

As His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, Governor of Cross River State, marks another birthday, I join the good people of Cross River State in celebrating a man who epitomizes intentional leadership, discipline and an uncommon sense of duty. In three years, you have confronted long-standing challenges with courage.

One of the most visible legacies of Your Excellency's administration is the determined effort to reclaim and rehabilitate decaying infrastructure across our State. From roads and public facilities to housing, power, water and other essential services, you have demonstrated that development is not merely about promises, but about deliberate action and visible results.

You have also made commendable strides in stabilizing security and restoring public confidence. Your commitment to security is not limited to rhetoric; it is reflected in coordinated action, stakeholder engagement and sustained investment in the safety of lives and property. By rightly prioritizing security, you have demonstrated that a secure environment is the foundation for education, commerce, agriculture and investment.

Beyond infrastructure and security, you have shown a clear commitment to agriculture, youth empowerment, education, healthcare, skills acquisition, support for farmers and agribusiness. Your successful efforts to reclaim Tinapa, an investment that was almost lost, and your acquisition of several aircrafts to strengthen Cally Air are legendary masterstrokes worthy of the highest commendation.

I am honoured to have embarked on this journey of service with Your Excellency, a man of good conscience and piety who has refused to be swayed by praise or daunted by criticism. I am proud to share in the accolades that have accrued from your purposeful leadership, which represent the collective progress of our State and the renewed hope of our people.

Your Excellency, Sir, I continue to pray, as I have done every year since we began this journey, that the Almighty will grant you even more strength, wisdom, good health and compassion to continue leading Cross River State to greater heights. May He sustain you in all your endeavours, and may your leadership remain a beacon of hope for us all.

Happy 67th Birthday, Your Excellency

Rt. Hon. (Dr.) Peter Odey
Deputy Governor of Cross River State

A FABULOUS BIRTHDAY TO A FINE GENTLEMAN

Apostle Sen. Prince
Bassey Edet Otu
Governor of Cross River State

On this special occasion, I warmly felicitate His Excellency, Apostle Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, Governor of Cross River State, as he celebrates another year of life.

Your Excellency, your birthday offers an opportunity to reflect on your years of service and the work being done to move Cross River State forward. Through your People First agenda, your administration has continued to pursue development in infrastructure, education, security, and the economy, with projects and programmes touching different parts of the state.

Across the state, several road projects stand out. In Calabar South, the 2.8-kilometre Etinyin-Abasi, Otomo Street, Uwanse and Atamunu road network has restored access to communities that endured years of poor road conditions. In Ogoja, the 10-kilometre Ndok Junction – Mbube – Okubushuyu Road is part of efforts to improve rural connectivity. Your administration has also revived work on the 10-kilometre Adiabo – Eseku – Ikoneto Road, an important alternative route into and out of Calabar, while road construction and rehabilitation continue in other parts of the state. These projects demonstrate the importance of infrastructure to commerce, agriculture, and the daily lives of our people.

In education, your administration has supported the payment of WAEC registration fees for students in public secondary schools, invested in classroom construction and rehabilitation, and established the University of Education and Entrepreneurship in Akamkpa. These interventions are helping to expand access to education and create opportunities for young people to acquire knowledge and practical skills for the future. Your administration has also continued to address security concerns through collaboration with security agencies and community stakeholders. The improvement in security in parts of the state is important for businesses, tourism, investment, and the confidence of residents. We recognise that sustaining peace requires continued attention, cooperation, and investment.

Equally noteworthy are the efforts to strengthen the state's revenue base, improve financial accountability, and recover public assets. A stronger revenue system gives the government greater capacity to fund infrastructure, provide public services, and meet its obligations to the people. The continued growth of tourism and the revival of major events such as Carnival Calabar also offer opportunities to attract visitors, support businesses, and create jobs for our people.

Your Excellency, these efforts reflect the responsibility that comes with leadership and the work required to build a state that serves its people. As Chief of Staff, I appreciate the opportunity to contribute to your administration's service to Cross River State and remain committed to supporting the realisation of its development goals.

As you celebrate this birthday, I pray that Almighty God grants you good health, wisdom, strength, and a renewed sense of purpose. May He continue to guide your decisions, bless your family, and give you the grace to accomplish even more for Cross River State.

Happy Birthday, Your Excellency. May God continue to bless you and Cross River State.

How Elder Bassey Abam Eko is restoring financial discipline to C' River's 18 LGAs, one audit at a time

By Omang Ekong

Six months into his tenure, the Auditor-General for Local Governments, Elder Bassey Abam Eko, has a message for anyone still hoping the old ways will survive: the books are being opened, and they are being read closely.

His half-year scorecard shows an office that has moved quickly against payroll irregularities and pension abuse, two problems that have long drained resources meant for the 18 Local Government Councils.

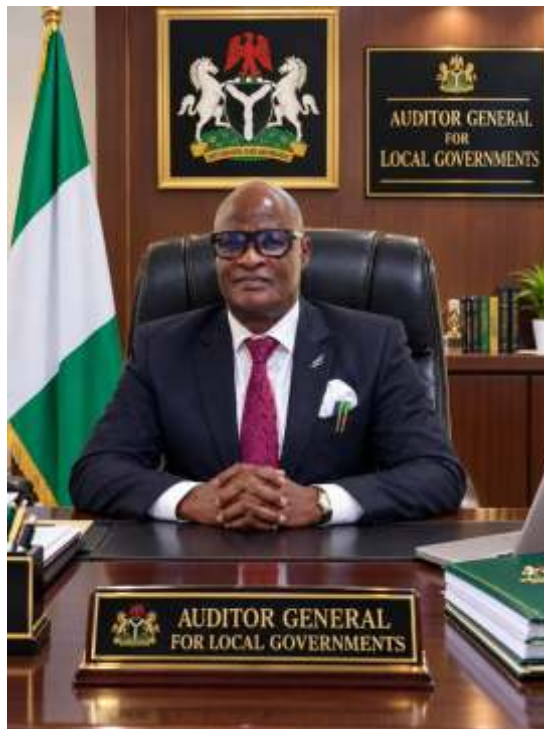

The sharpest finding came from a review of the ongoing promotion implementation at the Local Government level, an exercise approved by Governor Bassey Edet Otu. The audit established that 672 civil servants were drawing salaries well above their approved promotion grades.

The total financial loss is still being calculated. According to the Auditor-General, it will be established and recovered to the government treasury in the coming days. He credits the result to an uncompromising stance on fraud within the Local Government system.

The office also uncovered inflated pension payments to certain identified pensioners. In response, the Auditor-General says deliberate strategies are now in place to stop the padding of payrolls and the illegal inclusion of names in the monthly wage and pension bills.

The office also delivered on its statutory duties. Elder Eko inherited the 2025 audit of the 18 Councils when it was about 21 days behind schedule. It was completed and submitted to the Cross River State House of Assembly within the period required by law.

The Consolidated Financial Statements of the Councils were then published on the Auditor-General's website so that all stakeholders could access them. A copy has been presented to the Deputy Governor, Rt Hon Peter Odey, PhD. Monthly wage bills and pension schedules have also been audited and cleared on time.

Inside the office, Elder Eko

has focused on capacity. Specialised training has been delivered to address identified skill gaps among auditors and other categories of staff. A departmental reshuffle was carried out to put the right people in the right roles and raise productivity.

He attributes these gains to the support of Governor Otu and Deputy Governor Odey, who he says consistently approved funding for his office's operations. The Auditor-General reaffirmed a policy of zero tolerance for every form of illegality.

The scorecard also carries a warning. By the end of December 2026, the office stands to lose about 70 per cent of its most experienced staff to retirement. It currently has only 13 trained auditors to cover the workload of 18 Councils, and it has not recruited in years.

Until that gap is filled, the routine audit spot-checks across the Councils are being handled by the Chief of Staff to the Governor.

Six months on, the early record is one of recovery and enforcement. Whether it lasts will depend on what happens next: how much of the 672-case overpayment is actually recovered, and whether the office is allowed to recruit and replace the experience it is about to lose.

Congratulations,

Your Excellency

I heartily felicitate with His Excellency, Apostle Senator (Prince) Bassey Edet Otu, Governor of Cross River State, on the joyous occasion of his 2026 Birthday Thanksgiving Celebration.

This special moment offers an opportunity to celebrate not only the gift of life but also the grace, wisdom, strength and purposeful leadership that God has bestowed upon His Excellency in service to our dear state.

Your Excellency, your administration's People First philosophy reflects a deep commitment to the welfare of the people, inclusive governance, peace and sustainable development. Your dedication to advancing the interests of Cross Riverians continues to inspire hope and confidence in our collective aspiration for a more prosperous state.

I particularly appreciate your commitment to industrial growth, investment promotion, economic diversification and the creation of an enabling environment for businesses to thrive. These efforts are essential to building a stronger economy, creating employment opportunities and securing a brighter future for our people.

As you mark this significant milestone in an atmosphere of thanksgiving, I pray that Almighty God will continue to renew your strength, enlarge your wisdom, preserve your health and grant you greater grace to lead Cross River State towards unprecedented progress.

May your days be filled with divine favour, sound health, peace of mind and enduring accomplishments. May the years ahead bring even greater fulfilment to your vision for a peaceful, prosperous and economically vibrant Cross River State.

Once again, I congratulate His Excellency on this memorable Birthday Thanksgiving Celebration. May the Almighty God continue to uphold you, bless your family, strengthen your administration and crown your service to Cross River State with greater achievements.

Happy Prolific Birthday, Your Excellency!

Gov. Otu Extends Electric Vehicle Rollout To Judiciary, Presents 15 Cars To Magistrates

By Daniel Edet and Eme Effiom

Cross River State Governor, Prince Bassey Edet Otu, has extended the electric vehicle programme from organised labour to the judiciary, presenting 15 electric cars to magistrates across the State to improve their mobility, personal security and work efficiency.

Representing the Governor at the presentation ceremony, the Commissioner for Information and Orientation, Pastor Hon. Ekpenyong Ene Cobham, charged the beneficiaries to put the vehicles to responsible use. He said the gesture reflects the administration's determination to ease the transport burden on public servants and provide better working conditions so they can concentrate on their duties.

Cobham assured the magistrates of the vehicles' comfort, reliability and performance. He congratulated the first batch of beneficiaries and described the presentation as another milestone in the administration's drive to lift morale in the administration of justice and improve the welfare of public servants.

He disclosed that more eligible public servants will be covered in later phases as the electric vehicle initiative expands across the State.

Speaking with journalists, some of the beneficiaries thanked the Governor, calling the gesture timely and significant in tackling their transportation challenges and helping them discharge their judicial responsibilities better.

Magistrate Felicia Acha Uchinke said the vehicle would strengthen her work, especially in criminal matters, where dependence on public transport can expose magistrates to security and safety risks.

She noted that magistrates could unknowingly share a vehicle with persons whose cases they had handled or sentenced, a situation that could be uncomfortable and unsafe. According to her, the new vehicles will safeguard the dignity and security of magistrates and allow them to attend official engagements with greater confidence.

Also speaking, Chief Magistrate Ekong Ekong Imona thanked Governor Otu, describing the gesture as "the Lord's doing" and proof that the administration places a high priority on the welfare of magistrates.

He also praised the Chief Judge of the State, Hon. Justice Akon Ikpeme, who facilitated the initiative, for her leadership and commitment to the welfare of judicial officers. He said the vehicles would improve mobility and help magistrates carry out their duties more efficiently.

The Public Servant Of The Future

A public servant of the future is not only an ideal public servant but an exemplar. He is one who is physically fit, technologically savvy, citizen-centric, continually learning, ethically conscious and whose worldview is above par.

As developments evolve, expectations from both leaders and the governed continue to grow on an exponential scale. This growth is not only spontaneous but mounts at an immeasurable rate.

It becomes even more intense with the rising consciousness of citizens who see cutting-edge innovations in public service beyond national boundaries and become deeply interested in happenings on digital platforms.

Within these realities, the public servant is constantly pressured to either align with the changing times, scale up operations and stay ahead of the curve, or become as dead as mutton.

Staying abreast of these ideals requires courage, commitment and investment. On a micro level, the individual who must remain relevant has to be intentional about aligning with the realities of the public service of the time, which mirrors the future. On a macro level, governments at the local, sub-national and national levels must be genuinely committed to entrenching this future-oriented way of life in those who render service to communities.

This ultimately speaks to training and retraining. Of courage, commitment and investment, the most pertinent are investment and commitment. Courage, within the context of governance, flows naturally.

Within sub-nationals, the deliberateness of investing in and committing to these expectations has to be as clear as crystal. A good starting point would be the inclusion of substantial votes in annual budgets to cater for training and retraining.

The vehicles of governance across Ministries, Departments and Agencies (MDAs) such as the Offices of the Head of Service, Civil Service Commissions, Humanitarian Affairs, Human Capital Development and others must be well-oiled.

The collaboration expected among MDAs with training mandates must be hinged on clarity, strict adherence to established policies, and constant monitoring and evaluation to achieve concrete outcomes.

It is pertinent at this point to eulogize governments at any level that have committed to preparing public servants to fit the model we are projecting. Specifically, the Cross River State Government has been investing on an increasing scale in programmes geared towards the training and retraining of public servants.

This is evident in the significant improvement in its training votes and the regularity of training among key MDAs over the years. We especially commend the Office of the Head of Service for stopping at nothing to entrench digital skills in public servants and for organizing monthly physical fitness exercises to keep them healthy, and the Ministry of Establishments, Training and Pensions for consistently focusing on topical training issues such as succession planning, mentorship, attitudinal change, ethical conduct and communication skills in the service, among others.

A properly midwifed governance mechanism can positively impact revenue generation and service efficiency through the public servant who lives in the future. Such a public servant will be a natural revenue enhancer and one who can deliver service with speed and efficiency. This holds true when viewed from the perspectives of cost savings, removal of bureaucratic red tape and improved public trust.

In concluding this piece, paragons in public service across nations like Singapore, Australia, the United Kingdom and France readily come to mind. Public servants in these climes are groomed within models and environments that are citizen-centric, digitally interoperable, psychologically and physically safe, and focused on continually measuring outcomes, public value and co-designing solutions with affected communities.

In conclusion, it needs to be emphasized that the public servant of the future is emerging on an unprecedented scale across sub-nationals, and Cross River State is not left behind in the train that seeks to reinvent, strengthen and position the servant tomorrow.

Personnel Audit: C'River Validates 52,330 Staff, Pensioners' Profiles, 8,837 Outstanding

By: Kera Okem and Anastasia Ekuma

The Cross River State Government has validated 52,330 profiles out of 61,167 registered staff and pensioners in its ongoing state-wide personnel audit verification exercise, with 8,837 records still outstanding for further verification and administrative action.

The Head of Service, Barr. Orok Bassey Okon, has consequently convened an urgent meeting of the State-Wide Personnel Audit Verification Committee to review progress, identify challenges and agree on strategies to ensure the successful completion of the exercise.

An executive summary report dated October 14, 2026, showed that of the 8,837 outstanding records, 6,920 individuals are yet to commence the verification process, while 1,917 profiles are still in progress.

The report attributed the outstanding cases to biometric verification difficulties, network challenges, death cases, suspected ghost workers and service exits.

It further indicated that the committee responsible for reviewing and reconciling the findings had recorded 469 cases requiring further attention, while no cases were recorded under the categories of individuals who failed to appear for verification and unresolved cases.

As part of efforts to accelerate the exercise, targeted Information Technology operations will focus on the 1,917 profiles still in progress, with priority given to resolving biometric challenges, updating Bank Verification Numbers (BVNs) and correcting name discrepancies where necessary.

The committee meeting featured the presentation of a progress report, review of findings and observations, and discussions on challenges encountered during the verification process.

To ensure an orderly physical verification exercise, the Head of Service, Barr. Orok Bassey Okon, stated that a circular will be issued outlining the timetable for staff and pensioners to present themselves for verification.

A dedicated online link will also be provided for pensioners residing outside Nigeria to complete their validation remotely, eliminating the need to travel back to the country solely for the exercise.

The report recommended that all 61,167 registered individuals undergo proper status verification before any names are removed from the payroll, emphasising that such decisions must be based on accurate and validated records.

The exercise will also involve coordinated personnel verification, data capture, approval, clock-in arrangements, onboarding and office-location setup across the local government areas of the state.

The report stressed the need for sustained administrative follow-up to ensure that all outstanding records are properly addressed and that every account is either cleared or formally archived.

The Head of Service said the verification exercise is expected to strengthen personnel data management, promote accountability and improve the credibility of the State's payroll system.

He emphasised the importance of accurately verifying staff and pensioners' records before taking administrative decisions, noting that the exercise is a critical step towards ensuring a reliable personnel database and strengthening accountability in the State's public service.

C'River, UNICEF Review Social Protection Policy, Target Stronger Implementation

By Iloke Egbe

The Cross River State Government and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) have strengthened efforts to improve social protection delivery with a two-day stakeholders' sensitisation workshop aimed at addressing implementation challenges and ensuring that vulnerable residents benefit from government interventions.

The workshop, held on October 8 and 9, 2026, at Dannic Hotel, Ekorinim, Calabar, brought together representatives of government institutions, development partners, academia and civil society organisations to review progress on the State Social Protection Policy, identify gaps and develop strategies for more effective implementation.

Declaring the workshop open, the Commissioner for International Donor Coordination, Elder Dr. Hippolatus Ogar Lukpata, commended Governor Bassey Edet Otu for providing the institutional support and enabling environment required to advance the state's development priorities.

He said the workshop reflected a collective commitment to promoting social inclusion, reducing poverty and vulnerability, and improving the well-being of Cross Riverians.

Lukpata described social protection as a strategic investment in human capital and sustainable development rather than merely a welfare intervention. He explained that an effective system would help protect children, women, persons with disabilities, older persons and individuals affected by economic and social shocks.

"Through effective social protection measures, we can build resilient communities and create opportunities for all citizens to live with dignity and hope," he said.

The commissioner noted that the workshop offered stakeholders an opportunity to deepen their understanding of the policy, its objectives, implementation strategies and expected outcomes.

He pledged his ministry's continued commitment to strengthening partnerships, mobilising development partners' support and promoting coordinated interventions to translate the policy into meaningful benefits for the people.

The Commissioner for Women Affairs, Hon. Dr. Edema Irom, also commended Governor Otu for supporting strong institutions and providing the necessary backing to bring government interventions closer to vulnerable populations.

She praised the Ministry of International Donor Coordination and UNICEF for their expertise and commitment to advancing the policy's implementation.

The State Statistician-General, Mrs. Akedoh Okoi Edet, stressed the importance of credible data in identifying vulnerable populations, determining their needs and designing appropriate interventions.

She disclosed that the Bureau of Statistics had conducted disability surveys with the state government's support to help identify gaps and improve planning for persons with disabilities.

"The Bureau is the custodian of state data, and we do not accept data we did not participate in generating," Edet said, calling for stronger collaboration between the Bureau, government agencies and development partners to eliminate duplication and ensure that social protection programmes are guided by reliable data.

The workshop featured technical presentations, goodwill messages from development partners, plenary discussions and an assessment of progress made in implementing the policy.

Stakeholders also reviewed implementation challenges and the proposed 2027 work plan, with a view to identifying priority actions and strengthening coordination among relevant institutions.

Discussions centred on the Cross River State Social Protection Policy framework, prioritising social protection in the Renewed Hope era to ensure that no Cross Riverian is left behind, and progress in expanding the Unified Social Register in the state. Participants also examined challenges affecting implementation at the grassroots and explored options for securing sustainable financing for social protection programmes.

Gov. Otu Backs Upgrade of FCE Obudu to Federal University of Education

By Ukongikwen Adie

Cross River State Governor, Senator Prince Bassey Otu, has pledged to support efforts to upgrade the Federal College of Education (FCE), Obudu, to a Federal University of Education, assuring that his administration would work with the state's representatives in the National Assembly to advance the proposal.

Governor Otu, represented by his deputy, Rt. Hon. Dr. Peter Odey, gave the assurance on Wednesday when the Chairman of the 8th Governing Council of the College, Hon. Abdullahi Ahmed, led a delegation on a courtesy visit to the State Government at the Government House, Calabar.

The governor welcomed the visit, describing it as an opportunity to renew cooperation between the College and the state government. He noted that such engagement had not taken place in many years and commended the institution for its longstanding contributions to teacher education in Cross River State and Nigeria.

"We are delighted to receive the Governing Council of the Federal College of Education, Obudu. This visit provides an opportunity to renew our relationship and strengthen collaboration between the College and the Cross River State Government," Otu said.

The governor noted that the College had been running bachelor's degree programmes in affiliation with the University of Calabar since 2011, demonstrating its experience in degree-level teacher training and readiness for further academic advancement. He also highlighted the absence of a university of education in the South-South geopolitical zone, noting that other geopolitical zones already had such institutions. "The College has come of age and has demonstrated the capacity to take on greater responsibilities in teacher education. Its upgrade to a university of education would be a welcome development, particularly as the South-South geopolitical zone does not have such an institution," the governor stated.

While acknowledging that the conversion or renaming of a federal institution fell within the purview of the Federal Government, Otu assured the delegation that his administration would work with the state's representatives in the National Assembly to advance the proposal. He also pledged to advocate for the institution to be named after the late former Senate President, Joseph Wayas, as either Joseph Wayas College of Education or Joseph Wayas University of Education, depending on the outcome of the proposed upgrade.

Earlier, Ahmed appealed to the state government to assist the College with solar power installations to address unreliable electricity supply and reduce the high cost of diesel used to power its facilities. "Reliable electricity is essential to the effective running of the College. Support for solar power installations would help us address the challenges of irregular electricity supply and the high cost of diesel," the Council Chairman said.

He also requested government support for the provision of buses to improve transportation between the College's campuses in Obudu and Obanliku Local Government Areas, explaining that improved mobility would facilitate the movement of staff and students and enhance coordination between the two locations. Ahmed expressed confidence that the proposed conversion would become a reality with the support and advocacy of the state government. He said the College was counting on Otu's commitment and the cooperation of the state's representatives in the National Assembly to help realise the ambition of establishing a Federal University of Education in Obudu.

The Council Chairman also conveyed the goodwill of the Governing Council, management, staff and students to Governor Otu, wishing him success in his forthcoming re-election bid. Ahmed was accompanied on the visit by the Provost of the College, Dr. Richard Ugbaha Utubaku; the Registrar, Dr. Evans Osakwe Ikenya; Navy Captain Charles I. Ogwa (Rtd.); Dr. Mohammed Maru; and other members of the Governing Council.

My Boss

On behalf of the management and staff of the Cross River State Rural Development Agency (RUDA), I heartily congratulate His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, Governor of Cross River State, on the joyous occasion of his birthday. This milestone offers another opportunity to celebrate a visionary leader whose commitment to purposeful governance, inclusive development, and the welfare of Cross Riverians continues to inspire hope across the state.

Under your people first administration, rural communities across Cross River State are already feeling the positive impact of your leadership through renewed attention to grassroots development, rural infrastructure and improved community welfare. Your commitment to ensuring that development reaches the people at the grassroots reaffirms the importance of RUDA's mandate and strengthens our resolve to support your vision of a more prosperous, inclusive and economically vibrant state.

I pray that Almighty God grants you sound health, greater wisdom, renewed strength and many more years of fruitful service to Cross River State and humanity.

Congratulations and happy birthday, Your Excellency! May your years ahead be marked by greater accomplishments, enduring legacies and continued progress for the good people of Cross River State.

Signed,

Comr. Agbor Bassey Njar

Director-General

Cross River State Rural Development Agency (RUDA)

Every great destination begins as an idea of what a place could become. Before a visitor climbs into the mist of the Obudu plateau, stands beneath the falls at Agbokim, or loses track of time in the rhythm of the Calabar Carnival, someone first had to believe that this land was worth arriving at. Then they had to do the patient, unseen work of making it so.

At 67, His Excellency, Apostle, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, PNIPR, embodies that belief. Your People First philosophy has taught us something every serious student of tourism eventually learns. Visitors may come for the scenery, but they return because of the people. They return for the warmth of our communities, the safety of our roads, the pride of our workers and the confidence of those who invest in us. A paradise is only as real as the lives of those who call it home.

An old wisdom holds that we do not inherit the land from our ancestors; we borrow it from our children. Under your stewardship, Cross River is being prepared to return to its children richer in opportunity, in reputation and in hope than it was received. That is the quiet arithmetic of good leadership. Its returns are counted in generations, not seasons. As you mark this milestone, the Cross River State Tourism Bureau renews its commitment to translating your vision into experiences the world will travel to see. We will keep telling the Cross River story with the excellence it deserves.

May the Almighty grant you wisdom for the journey, strength for the work and many more years to see the harvest of the seeds you are sowing.

Happy Birthday, Your Excellency.

Cross River State Tourism Bureau.

Calabar Landslide Damage Beyond State's Capacity, We Have Run to FG for Help

— Environment Commissioner

In this exclusive interview with Info Daily Bulletin, our editorial team led by the Editor-in-Chief, Rekpen Uket, alongside Production Editor, Nakanda Iyadim and Environment Correspondent, Sylvia Okoi, engaged the Cross River State Commissioner for Environment, Barr. Bassey Mensah, who bares his mind on the environmental challenges currently confronting the state, efforts being made to address them, and the way forward.

*EXCERPTS:

Q: Honourable Commissioner, it is no longer news that several parts of Calabar have been affected by landslides, leading to loss of lives and destruction of property. What is your official assessment of what went wrong?

A: Thank you so much. It is unfortunate, even though people have attributed different meanings to the incident. Some attribute it to the goddess Anansa, while others believe it has to do with the inability to offer sacrifices to the gods. However, I disagree with such explanations.

To the best of my knowledge, this is a consequence of climate change. It is not happening here alone. If you follow developments on social media, you will see similar incidents occurring in other countries. Unfortunately, this is the reality of climate change.

It is a very sad and pathetic situation, but I thank God that the Anansa incident did not claim any lives, unlike the other incident that occurred at another location, where about four people reportedly died.

We went on an assessment visit with the relevant committee, and its members were astonished, particularly by the collapse of the entire hospital built by Lafarge. We are concerned about the situation.

As a state, we have conducted our assessment and realised that the scale of the damage is beyond our financial capacity. That is the honest truth. This informed our decision to visit Abuja about two weeks ago.

Fortunately, we met with the Permanent Secretary of the Ecological Department, who expressed sympathy for Cross River State and acknowledged the severity of the situation. The Federal Government has since set up a committee to assess the situation. By the grace of God, the committee will visit the state next week to inspect the affected areas.

Following our assessment, we examined the cost implications and realised that the state government could not shoulder the financial burden alone. The NNPC and Lafarge are also affected by the incident. The Federal Government's team is expected to arrive next Wednesday, all things being equal, to conduct a further inspection and determine the necessary interventions.

Q: Is there a long-term engineering solution to Calabar's drainage crisis?

A: I believe there is a need for a comprehensive drainage master plan. Calabar in the 1980s was not as densely populated as it is today. Some of the infrastructure developed at the time did not adequately anticipate the level of population growth and urban expansion we are experiencing now.

There is, therefore, an urgent need for the Ministry of Works, the Ministry of Environment and the relevant Town Planning authorities to sit together and address these challenges comprehensively.

There is so much work to be done, honestly speaking, but environmental management cannot be the responsibility of the Ministry of Environment alone. There must be synergy among the relevant ministries and agencies to ensure that we get things right.

Q: We understand that the Greater Calabar Development Agency is proposing a 50-year development plan for Calabar. How is your ministry collaborating with the Agency to ensure actualization of this lofty plan?

A: The only way we can succeed is by working together. We are all working towards the same destination, and collaboration is essential to achieving our objectives. My ministry is committed to working in partnership with the Greater Calabar Development Agency because we can achieve more when we work as a team.

Q: Can you tell us if Cross River has been able to access the Ecological Fund, given the enormity of the disaster that has befallen the state?

A: We are expecting a delegation from the Federal Secretariat responsible for the Ecological Fund next week for an on-the-spot assessment of the damage caused in Anansa and other affected areas, including the swampy areas.

The situation at WAPI Junction is similar to what happened at Anansa, and in some respects, it is even worse. If not for the timely intervention of people such as Faith Plant, the situation could have deteriorated further, potentially affecting the entire area. We have also captured these challenges in our memorandum to the Ecological Fund for consideration.

Q: Calabar was once celebrated as the cleanest city in Nigeria, but today the story is different. What efforts are you making to restore Calabar's cleanliness and improve waste disposal?

A: I resumed office on July 28 and honestly gave myself 100 days to make significant progress. However, I am not yet entirely satisfied with the situation because one of our major challenges is people's attitude towards environmental cleanliness.

We have allowed people to behave carelessly for so long that changing those habits has become difficult. For instance, some people are accustomed to eating bananas and throwing the peels into gutters without considering the consequences.

That is why I always say that environmental work is not done only in the office. I go into the field regularly. Most times, I leave home by 8 a.m. to inspect different locations, including Mobil and Achimbo Roundabout.

Some people are attempting to turn these strategic locations into markets, and we will not allow that to continue. We have deployed enforcement teams to Mobil, Watt Market and other strategic locations to address these issues and ensure compliance with environmental regulations.

My goal is to restore environmental consciousness among residents. There was a time when people in Calabar were so conscious of cleanliness that they would not drink sachet water and throw the empty sachet onto the road. We must gradually return to that culture of environmental responsibility.

Q: In recent times, traders at Watt Market, which is at the heart of the city, have turned that stretch of Calabar Road into a trading point. What are you doing to restore order there?*

A: We need to involve paramount rulers, traditional rulers and everyone in the effort to restore environmental order. If we allow things to continue as they are, traders may eventually take over the entire area around Watt Market, which is the heart of Calabar's commercial activities.

I have been visiting the area daily, and gradually, we have recorded about 60 per cent progress. We are working to restore order and ensure that traders operate within the designated market.

Some traders prefer selling along the roads because they believe their goods sell faster when customers can simply park their vehicles and buy from them. However, that practice is unacceptable.

Those who trade on the roads reportedly pay more to certain agents than traders operating inside the market. While traders inside pay about ₦100, those outside may pay as much as ₦1,000. This situation encourages street trading and undermines efforts to restore order.

During Governor Donald Duke's administration, the market was fenced to ensure that trading took place within the designated premises. However, some traders have deliberately abandoned the available spaces inside the market and chosen to sell outside.

Q: Most of the flooding in the city is largely caused by blocked drainages. What is being done about desilting drainage channels to prevent flooding?*

A: There are drainage channels in Calabar that have not been desilted for 10 to 15 years. For instance, the drainage around St. Elias Primary School in the Shawfu area has reportedly not been desilted for more than 12 years.

We have commenced work there and have evacuated over 12 truckloads of silt and debris, yet we have covered only about 100 metres of the channel, with more than 300 metres still to be cleared. This gives you an idea of the scale of the problem we are dealing with.

Since we cleared part of the channel, there has been an improvement in the flow of water.

Q: Every last Saturday of the month, the State Government through your ministry carries out statewide environmental sanitation, yet the situation has not changed especially in other urban centres. How calling me should not be a reason for that person to escape the consequences. The law must take its course.

Q: Key stakeholders in environmental issues are host communities. How are you engaging communities in erosion-prone areas?*

A: Some erosion problems problems, reporting violations and sensitising residents on proper environmental practices.

Q: Despite the Ministry's efforts in evacuation, some areas still have heaps of refuse immediately after monthly sanitation. What measures are you taking to improve waste evacuation?*

do you intend to step up enforcement for better outcome?*

A: We are determined to ensure that people comply with environmental regulations. We must ensure that people face the consequences of their actions. No one should expect special treatment simply because they know a commissioner or another government official.

If someone violates traffic regulations and is arrested, are caused by human activities such as indiscriminate sand mining, the destruction of vegetation and improper waste disposal. To strengthen community engagement, I recently established a network of liaison officers within the Ministry of Environment.

Calabar Municipality has 12 wards, and I have appointed 12 officers to monitor environmental activities within their respective wards. Their responsibilities include identifying environmental

A: Waste evacuation is one of the major challenges confronting us. It is an issue that continues to give me sleepless nights. It is like water supply: no matter what the government does, if the ordinary person turns on the tap and water does not flow, they will not appreciate the effort.

I have identified inadequate waste bins and insufficient contractors as major challenges. I have gone round the metropolis and submitted a proposal to His Excellency on the need to expand our waste management operations. We must either engage more contractors or establish intervention teams.

We are exploring ways to increase the number of waste bins in each ward. Our plan is to divide Calabar into smaller operational zones and ensure that waste bins are strategically located close to residents.

This is one of the reasons I want the Ministry to have its own trucks for emergency interventions. With at least two trucks, we could respond promptly when contractors fail to evacuate waste, particularly along major highways. We also intend to relocate waste bins currently placed along the major highways at the entrances to Calabar to more suitable locations.

Q: Environmental sanitation appears to be more actively enforced in Calabar metropolis than in some local government areas. Can the Ministry replicate its efforts across the state?*

A: Thank you for this information. At the next sanitation exercise, I will send some of my staff to supervise the exercise in the local government areas. That is how it should be.

The executive secretaries responsible for environmental sanitation in the local government areas were appointed by this government, and they are expected to perform their duties effectively. We must ensure that they carry out their responsibilities.

Q: Finally sir, while we sincerely commend your untiring efforts in repositioning the Ministry of Environment less than 100 days in office, what is your final message to residents of Cross River State?*

A: My message to the people of Cross River State is that they should become more environmentally conscious and cooperate with the government. I have even made appeals in church, encouraging religious institutions to educate and sensitise their members about environmental cleanliness.

As I speak, we are working around the airport to restore the green areas by planting grass and improving the environment. We are working to reclaim the green spaces and prevent people from using them as unauthorised parking areas. We intend to acquire wheel clamps to enforce compliance.

However, the government cannot achieve these objectives without the cooperation of the people.

For Cross River, the strategic opportunity lies in turning agricultural potential into measurable economic outcomes: higher production, value addition, job creation, better farmer incomes and expanded agribusiness investment.

The policy imperative is clear: move beyond producing coffee to building a sustainable coffee economy that creates value from farm to market and positions Cross River as a significant contributor to Nigeria's coffee future.

From Jos to Calabar, the journey continues. This October, Cross River will welcome the global coffee community to advance a shared ambition: a sustainable, competitive and investment-ready Nigerian coffee industry.

Cross River State has begun preparations for Nigeria's 2nd International Coffee Festival, scheduled to hold from October 30 to November 1, 2026, at the ASUU Hall, University of Calabar.

The Commissioner for Agriculture and Irrigation Development, Hon. Johnson Andiambey Ebokpo, flagged off an awareness rally as part of early mobilisation for the event.

The second edition will host coffee experts from about 30 countries under the theme "Sustainability: Building the Future of Coffee in Nigeria."

Following the successful maiden edition in Jos, Plateau State, in 2025, the festival brings the global coffee conversation to Cross River at a time when the state is working to develop coffee into a viable agricultural and commercial value chain.

Beyond lectures, trainings, panel discussions, exhibitions, barista competitions, pageantry and international networking, the festival offers farmers, entrepreneurs and investors a chance to connect with the knowledge, technology and market partnerships needed to strengthen Nigeria's coffee

Gov. Otu Approves Rehabilitation Of Ogoja-katsina-ala Expressway, Abuochiche Roundabout

By Monica Ogar

Cross River State Governor, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, has approved the immediate rehabilitation of dilapidated portions of the Ogoja-Katsina-Ala Expressway, including the Abuochiche Roundabout in Bekwarra Local Government Area.

The approval is in response to the deplorable condition of the federal highway, which has become a major concern for motorists, commuters and residents of the northern senatorial district. The intervention, which will commence immediately, is aimed at easing traffic flow, preventing accidents and boosting economic activities along the corridor.

Following the Governor's approval, the Commissioner for Works and Infrastructure, Hon. Dr. Ankpo Pius Edet, has commenced an on-the-spot inspection of the affected road corridor.

The Commissioner, who visited Abuochiche alongside his team, said the inspection was to fast-track the implementation of the Governor's directive. He noted that it also forms part of the ongoing statewide inspection tour to assess road projects awarded by the Cross River State Government across the Northern and Central Senatorial Districts, with a view to attending to those in bad condition.

He added that the inspection would afford the Ministry the opportunity to obtain first-hand information on the actual state of the roads, identify critical areas that require urgent attention, and review contract agreements with contractors to ensure compliance.

Hon. Dr. Edet emphasized that the Ministry will ensure that the rehabilitation works and the drainage system along the axis meet the required engineering standards of the Ministry of Works and Infrastructure.

He reiterated the commitment of the Governor Otu-led administration to delivering quality, durable and people-oriented infrastructure across all parts of the state.

Mensah Gives Roadside Mechanics, Street Traders October 31 Deadline to Vacate Roads

...Inspects Business Areas, Erosion Sites, Orders Environmental Compliance

By Sylvia Okoi

The Cross River State Commissioner for Environment, Barr. Bassey Offiong Mensah, has given roadside mechanics and street traders operating in parts of Calabar until October 31, 2026, to vacate unauthorised locations or face sanctions.

The Commissioner issued the ultimatum during an on-the-spot inspection of Kings Street, White House, Bedwell, Punch, Victor Akan and other adjoining streets, where he expressed concern over obstruction of human and vehicular movement and environmental defacement caused by the activities of roadside mechanics.

He noted that residents in the affected areas had complained about possible exposure to harmful chemicals from their operations, stressing the need to protect public health and restore environmental order. He directed the mechanics to restrict their activities to designated workshops.

Mensah, who was accompanied by the Senior Special Assistant to the Governor on Automobile

Technician Regulatory Department, Chief Ndem Effiong, said government would no longer tolerate activities that undermine environmental standards and public safety.

At Bogobiri, Barr. Mensah expressed dissatisfaction with the unhygienic conditions, particularly as food meant for public consumption was being sold there. He also visited Target, where he cautioned street vendors against trading on the road and sensitised them on the importance of maintaining clean business premises.

The Commissioner further inspected commercial areas, emphasising the need for improved sanitation, a healthy business environment and measures to protect customers from potential health hazards.

At a gully erosion site off Charmley Street, he assured residents of government's commitment to addressing the challenge, noting that efforts would be expedited through collaboration with the Nigeria Climate Adaptation-Erosion and Watershed Project (NEWMAP-EIB).

The inspection also extended to the Harbour axis off the Murtala Mohammed Highway, near the NNPC depot, where Mensah frowned at the indiscriminate parking of trucks along the road, warning against practices that obstruct traffic and compromise environmental order.

The Commissioner declared that the state must reclaim its environmental integrity, stressing that government would no longer tolerate practices that undermine the state's reputation and the welfare of its residents.

He also visited the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) office, where he assured that measures would be taken to trim overgrown trees and replace old ones where necessary.

Mensah said the inspection forms part of the Ministry's ongoing efforts to restore Cross River State's clean and healthy environment through improved sanitation, enforcement of environmental regulations and sustained public sensitisation.

Speaking, the SSA to the Governor on Automobile Technician Regulatory Department, Chief Ndem Effiong, disclosed that he had engaged automobile dealers on the need to separate vehicle sales from mechanic operations. He expressed dismay over the increasing environmental degradation resulting from the activities of mechanics operating along the streets.

During the inspection, leaders of the automobile dealers and other business operators commended the Commissioner for his commitment to ensuring environmental sanity in the state. While expressing concerns about proximity to their customers, they assured him of their support and readiness to comply with environmental laws and desist from activities that pose hazards to the environment.

Gov Otu Assures Bakassi of Democratic Dividends as Largest Support Group Endorses Him, Tinubu for Second Term

By Nakanda Iyadim

Governor of Cross River State, Senator Bassey Edet Otu, has assured the people of Bakassi Local Government Area of sustained delivery of the dividends of democracy, reaffirming his administration's commitment to security, continuity and people-oriented development.

The Governor gave the assurance at the weekend during a town hall meeting organised by the Ideal Progressive Movement, the largest political support group in the area, held in Ikot Effiom, Bakassi. He was represented by the Commissioner for Information and Orientation, Pastor Ekpenyong Cobham.

Held under the theme "For Consolidation and Continuity", the meeting drew a large turnout of stakeholders, traditional rulers, youth and women's groups, who unanimously endorsed Governor Otu and President Bola Ahmed Tinubu for a second term in office.

Speaking at the event, the Information Commissioner said the administration had deliberately prioritised peace and security as the foundation for development, noting that Bakassi, which suffered years of insecurity, kidnapping, sea piracy and communal challenges, is now experiencing relative stability.

"Without peace, there is no progress. This administration met legacies of insecurity but confronted them head-on. Today, our farmers go to farm, our fishermen go to sea, our traders do business and our children go to school in peace," he said.

He added that Governor Otu had broken the cycle of abandoned projects that plagued previous administrations by choosing continuity over politics.

"The Governor has shown that governance is not a sprint. The first term lays the foundation; the second term completes the building. That is why continuity matters," he stressed.

In his welcome address, the Chairman of the movement's Board of Trustees, AIG Ene Okon (Rtd), said Cross River State must stay the course and allow Governor Otu to complete eight years in office, in line with the precedent set since 1999.

He said the movement, the first of its kind among support groups in Bakassi, had joined forces with the All Progressives Congress (APC) to promote the achievements of the Governor.

"Since 1999, our state has had four democratically elected governors. Senator Otu is the fourth. Each of those before him was given the full eight years to plan, build and deliver dividends of democracy to the people. That is the standard our state has set," he said.

"So we ask a simple question: why should Senator Prince Bassey Otu's tenure be different? It cannot. He has to complete his tenure," he added.

The movement identified security as the administration's most significant achievement, arguing that there can be no meaningful progress without peace.

"This administration confronted the legacies of insecurity that once troubled our people: kidnapping, militancy, sea piracy, armed robbery and cultism in Bakassi and beyond. Today, our farmers go to farm in peace, our fishermen go to the waters and return with sustainable catches, our traders go about their businesses without fear, and our children go to school with greater confidence, because the safety of lives and property was made the first priority. We thank our dear Governor," the group stated.

The movement also commended the Governor for breaking the cycle of abandoned projects.

"For too long, Cross River State was plagued by a lack of continuity. Each administration abandoned the work of the last. Governor Otu chose a different path. He decided to complete what others left behind," it said.

Projects it listed as completed or revived by the administration include the state-of-the-art State Library Complex, which two previous administrations failed to address; the renovated Governor's Office; the completed Local Government Service Commission Complex; the renovated Cross River State Newspaper Corporation; and the ongoing rehabilitation of the Cultural Centre Complex, among numerous other projects across sectors.

"This is leadership with humility and focus, the kind that values the concerns of the people. To stop this process now would frustrate his determination to leave the state better than he met it," the group said.

Chairman of the occasion, Engr Eyo Ita, who described Governor Otu as the best man for the job, said: "Here in Cross River State, we proudly support

His Excellency, Senator Prince Bassey Edet Otu, whose People First philosophy reflects the kind of people-centred governance our Forum seeks to promote. His administration's attention to infrastructure, economic development, security, social welfare and the general renewal of Cross River State gives us reason to continue mobilising grassroots support for his leadership.

"Let me state clearly that in the Ideal Progressive Movement, we are not in competition or contest with any other APC support group. Rather, we see every genuine support group as a partner working toward the same objective: the success, unity and electoral victory of the APC."

Engr Ita added: "We equally stand firmly behind Senator Asuquo Ekpenyong, whose representation of Cross River Southern Senatorial District and interventions in communities demonstrate the importance of responsive representation. His efforts in infrastructure, connectivity, empowerment and community development deserve continued grassroots engagement and support."

The group disclosed that it has rolled out a comprehensive action plan for grassroots sensitisation, mobilisation and stakeholder engagement to sustain support for the administration and ensure continuity beyond 2027.

The town hall ended with the unanimous adoption of a motion endorsing Governor Otu and President Tinubu for a second term, amid chants of solidarity from supporters who described the administration as a Government that does not abandon projects or people."

The Governor was later invested as Patron of the movement by the vice Chairman of Bakassisi Christ

By Kingsley Agim

Cross River State Governor, Senator Prince Bassey Otu, has directed the immediate commencement of comprehensive renovation, remodelling and upgrading works at the permanent National Youth Service Corps (NYSC) orientation camp in Obubra to improve facilities and enhance the welfare of corps members and camp officials.

Governor Otu, represented by his deputy, Rt. Hon. Peter Odey, gave the assurance on Thursday during an inspection tour of the temporary NYSC orientation camp at the University of Education and Entrepreneurship (UEE), Akamkpa.

The Governor explained that the temporary relocation of the orientation camp from Obubra to Akamkpa was necessary to allow for the comprehensive rehabilitation of the permanent facility, which is due for its first major upgrade since its establishment.

He said the planned intervention would improve infrastructure and provide a more conducive environment for corps members and NYSC officials during orientation exercises.

“The temporary relocation of the orientation camp to Akamkpa is necessary to enable us to undertake comprehensive renovation and remodelling of the permanent facility in Obubra. Work will commence immediately to improve the camp and enhance the comfort of corps members and officials,” Otu said.

The Governor reaffirmed his administration’s commitment to youth development and institutional improvement, noting that providing suitable facilities for young Nigerians undertaking their national service remained an important responsibility of the state government.

In her remarks, the NYSC State Coordinator, Mrs Joke Oyenuga, commended Governor Otu for approving the temporary relocation and supporting the planned renovation of the permanent camp.

“We appreciate Governor Otu for approving the relocation of the orientation camp to UEE, Akamkpa, and for his commitment to the comprehensive renovation and remodelling of the permanent facility in Obubra. The improvements will help provide a more conducive environment for corps members and NYSC officials,” Oyenuga said.

Also speaking, the Assistant Director, Corps Inspection and Monitoring, NYSC, Cross River State, disclosed that an average of 2,000 corps members are deployed to the state. He expressed satisfaction with the facilities at UEE, Akamkpa, which will host the 2026 Batch ‘C’ Stream II orientation exercise scheduled to commence on November 4.

He, however, appealed to the state government to improve the temporary camp’s facilities to meet NYSC standards and ensure the comfort of corps members. He also called for the timely completion of the renovation works at Obubra.

Commissioner for Youth Development, Ijom-Odum Ukam; Calabar Zonal Inspector, Mr Tony Odey; and the Vice-Chancellor of UEE, Prof. Patrick Asuquo, who conducted the delegation around the facilities.

The planned rehabilitation of the Obubra camp is expected to improve facilities for future orientation exercises, while the temporary arrangement at Akamkpa will enable the state to continue hosting corps members during the renovation period.

Also in company of the Governor’s delegation were the Secretary to the State Government, Prof. Anthony Owan Enoh, Commissioner for Youths and Skills Acquisition, Barr. Ijom Ukam, among others.

C’River Begins Electric Vehicle Repairs, Maintenance Training for 1,000 Youths

By Kingsley Agim

The Cross River State Government has commenced a six-month electric vehicle (EV) repairs, maintenance and assembly training programme for 1,000 youths, equipping them with specialised skills to tap into emerging employment opportunities

In the electric mobility and green energy sectors.

The programme, organised through the Cross River State Youth Empowerment Scheme (CR-YES) in partnership with the Federal Ministry of Education and Shema Energy Limited, is designed to develop a skilled workforce to support the state's growing investment in cleaner transportation.

Speaking at the flag-off ceremony, held on Wednesday in Calabar, CR-YES Chairman, Dr. Kalita Joseph Aruku, described the training as a strategic investment in youth empowerment and technological advancement, reflecting Governor Bassey Edet Otu's commitment to preparing young people for emerging industries.

Aruku disclosed that the state had procured an environmentally friendly fleet comprising 10 electric buses with 50-seat capacity, 20 electric buses with 14-seat capacity, 100 electric sedan cars, 500 electric tricycles and 200 electric motorcycles. He said the growing fleet would require skilled technicians to maintain and repair the vehicles, creating opportunities for trained youths to participate in the expanding electric mobility industry.

"The introduction of electric vehicles creates new opportunities for our youths. We want them to acquire the technical skills required to maintain these vehicles and become part of the workforce supporting the growth of electric mobility in Cross River State," Aruku said. He thanked the Federal Government under President Bola Ahmed Tinubu, the Federal Ministry of Education and Shema Energy Limited for supporting the programme, urging participants to demonstrate discipline and commitment.

Also speaking, the Commissioner for Wealth Creation and Employment, Mr. Patrick Egbede, said the State's investment in skills development was intended to translate empowerment programmes into sustainable livelihoods. He cited the agricultural training of 400 beneficiaries in Nasarawa State, who subsequently received ₦2 million each to invest in their ventures, as well as information and communication technology programmes covering cybersecurity, frontend development, product design, business development and artificial intelligence.

Egbede explained that the ICT training was extended from three to five months following requests from prospective employers seeking participants with deeper practical knowledge. He added that many beneficiaries had subsequently secured employment with the Federal Government. He also disclosed that a new artificial intelligence training programme had commenced, with 250 participants expected to be trained in each of the state's three senatorial districts.

"These programmes are designed to build a pool of skilled young people who can meet employers' needs and compete for opportunities in different sectors of the economy," Egbede said, describing the EV training as a timely investment in a specialised technical field. He urged Shema Energy Limited to prioritise practical assessments, noting that some trainees might demonstrate their competence more effectively through hands-on tasks than written examinations.

The commissioner encouraged participants to take the six-month training seriously, adding that certificates awarded upon successful completion could strengthen their employment prospects locally and internationally. He noted that the transition from fossil-fuel-powered mobility was creating demand for specialised technical skills while supporting environmental sustainability.

In his remarks, the Head of Skills and Strategy at Shema Energy Limited, Prince Dominic Usi, described the programme as an opportunity for Cross River youths to gain practical experience in a rapidly evolving industry.

Usi, a former student of the University of Calabar, explained that the training would comprise three months of intensive instruction and practical learning, followed by another three months of specialised training. Participants would also receive stipends, subject to applicable attendance requirements.

Usi said biometric monitoring would be used to track attendance, while instructional materials would be provided through an online portal containing different training modules. Participants would be required to complete practical exercises on electric vehicles and upload live video evidence of their work for assessment before progressing to subsequent modules.

He identified diagnostics and mechatronics as key components of the training, explaining that participants would learn to identify faults in electric vehicles and tricycles, understand troubleshooting procedures and acquire relevant assembly skills. He urged trainees to comply with attendance rules, including completing the required clock-in procedures before 9 a.m., and introduced the designated training centre managers responsible for supporting participants in Calabar Municipality and Ogoja.

The programme is expected to strengthen the state's technical workforce, expand employment and entrepreneurship opportunities for young people, and build local capacity for electric vehicle repairs, maintenance and assembly. It also aligns with the Cross River State Government's stated commitment to youth empowerment, technical skills development and cleaner transportation under Governor Otu's People First agenda.
